presenting today

A smorgasbord with something for everyone: that's the weekly menu planned for Today Magazine, the new weekend reading enclosed in your copy of today's Times. With a bold, modern format, designed for the '80s, Today explores contemporary Canada through features about people involved in current issues. There are at least twice as many articles as Today's forerunner carried, and they cover such diverse topics as politics, fact-filled items on daily living, fashion and beauty, children and money management, travel and leisure, cooking and sports. Welcome to Today!

It doesn't take a dermatologist to compound a face pack which will slough the lines of winter clean off your face. Claudia Wilimovsky, writing in Today, tells how salad-bar preparations can do as much for the face as the best from Charles of the Ritz — and the leftovers can feed the face from the inside!

RN deal in danger?

A tentative agreement which could avert a strike by registered nurses has been threatened because hospital bargainers have leaked word of the pact.

Malcolm Wilkinson, chief negotiator for the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., said today the Hospital Labor Relations Association has jeopardized the tentative agreement by announcing it to hospital administrations throughout the province.

"It's beyond me why they would release the information," Wilkinson said.

"We've had such delicate negotiations anything could upset the balance."

The RNABC members voted more than 90 per cent to strike.

They were demanding an 18 per cent pay increase over one year on a starting rate of $1,305 a month, plus a special economic catchup.

The HLRA returned with an offer of a 24 per cent increase over two years.

Wilkinson said the verbal agreement — he refused to release details — was reached Friday after 60 days of negotiations between the association, HLRA and mediator Clark Gilmour.

Wilkinson said he hopes a written agreement can be drafted by Wednesday when full details will be released.

The contract will then go to the executive of the HLRA and then to the RNABC for consideration.

Wilkinson was angry that word of the proposed settlement was leaked.

"I believe they used their fan-out phone system where one hospital is contacted and told to pass the word on to the next," he said.

"This causes distortions as the rumor gets passed along and we had a number of calls into the office yesterday afternoon from our nurses wanting to know if the rumors they were hearing were true."

The association apparently contacted all of its 113 hospitals in the province to inform them of the present situation and asked them to post the information on notice boards.

But it hasn't released any details of the tentative agreement.

The nurses' contract expired Dec. 31.

Gov't yields on hotel

The Glenshiel Hotel will remain open for the residents who now live there for as long as they choose to stay, residents have been told.

The reprieve was announced after a meeting Friday between residents and two cabinet ministers.

Olive Stuart, along with two other residents of the hotel and well-known artist Max Maynard, met for about an hour with Highways Minister Alex Fraser and Housing Minister James Chabot.

Stuart said the ministers promised that tenants will be allowed to stay there for the rest of their lives but that no new residents will be taken into the hotel.

The ministers also said most of the necessary repairs have been completed to the hotel and pledged that the elevator will be fixed and the roof repaired, said Stuart.

Liquor sales rise 8%

Liquor sales through the B.C. Liquor Distribution Branch rose eight per cent for a total of $526.2 million during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1979, says the branch's annual report.

The report said $207 million, 19.3 per cent more than last year, was poured into provincial coffers.

Winter falls on spring

Winter sprang on spring overnight.

Chilly conditions returned to southern Vancouver Island, coating the hills with snow.

Several inches of snow fell on the Malahat, keeping highways salting crews busy most of the night.

But the Victoria Weather office says the cold and snow won't last.

A weather system from the northwest is moving in, bringing with it warmer temperatures. By Sunday, there's a strong chance of rain.

Greater Victoria residents got off lightly compared with the northern half of the Island which was hit hard by snowstorms.

This morning there was still a foot of snow on the ground at Campbell River.

Soviets dig in for two years

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Soviet commanders have told their troops to expect to stay in Afghanistan for two years, government officials disclosed Friday.

This "hard" information coming from Afghanistan signifies that the Kremlin has concluded it will take at least that long to quell the rebellion in that country, rebuild the Afghan army and install an acceptable government.

Sources said that the two-year estimate represents a change because the Soviets originally hoped to make a quick fix in Afghanistan and then withdraw the bulk of their troops by this summer.

The recent notification to troops about two-year tours comes on top of other evidence that the Soviets are digging in for a long stay in Afghanistan.

Formerly understrength units in the Soviet Union near the Afghan border are being filled up and war stocks there and in Afghanistan are being increased, sources said.

The U.S. government estimates that there are about 80,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan and 30,000 others in border camps. Soviet dissidents are passing the word to U.S. officials that Russian families are becoming alarmed about the ferocity of the fighting in Afghanistan.

One report from Afghanistan obtained by U.S. officials asserts that some Soviet troops have been mutilated. Dead Russian soldiers have been found with their noses and ears

Multiple voting illegal

NANAIMO (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court ruling released Friday will prohibit voters from casting ballots in more than one electoral area of a regional district.

Mr. Justice Martin R. Taylor ruled that in civic elections, people residing in one electoral area of a regional district cannot vote in other areas of that district where they own property.

Previously, resident electors who owned property in other electoral areas of the same regional district were allowed to vote in the area where they lived and in areas where they own property.

The ruling, sought by Nanaimo Regional District in February, also will overturn a ruling by the regional district's court of revision dealing with the voters' list in one of the district's eight electoral areas where a byelection will be held March 29.

Four people living in an adjacent electoral area of the region but owning property in the area in question were allowed to vote in both areas.

Under Friday's ruling, their names will be struck from the voters list in the electoral area where the byelection is being held.

The byelection was called following a county court decision in January that invalidated the election of Paul Smith because of voter registration irregularities.

The irregularities were charged by Gerry Van Horne who lost to Smith by five votes and is opposing him in the byelection.

Carter aims at loans, gas

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Jimmy Carter said Friday Americans must sacrifice to halt inflation — giving up "good worthwhile programs" to balance the federal budget, borrowing less and paying an extra 10 cents a gallon for gasoline.

But that sacrifice now, Carter told Americans on nation-wide television, will be "much less onerous — particularly for the needy — than the serious suffering that will occur if we don't arrest the inflationary spiral."

That was the theme of the president's new package of anti-inflation proposals, unveiled Friday after weeks of top-level administration review and after eight days of consultation with leaders in Congress. Among the proposals:

—For the first time in 12 years, the federal budget will be balanced in 1981. This will require $13 billion to $14 billion in spending cuts in what Carter called "good worthwhile programs" ranging from mass transit to welfare reform. Some $2 billion will be cut in the current fiscal 1980 budget.

—At Carter's request, the Federal Reserve Board simultaneously announced indirect controls on credit cards held by 60 million Americans and on other consumer credit. Issuers of credit cards must deposit with the Federal Reserve 15 per cent of any expansion in their loans. In a separate move to reduce credit, the Federal Reserve imposed a 3 per cent surcharge on large banks if they borrow too frequently from the Federal Reserve

They'll bring rape facts home

By MIKE HUGHES

Victoria's Rape Assault Centre has a confrontation tactic ready in cases where they suspect a rapist has gone unpunished.

The plan originated in California and has been used by members of the Vancouver Rape Relief Centre.

Basically it calls for a group of women — including the rape victim — to appear at the home of a rapist who is not charged or convicted.

In some cases, the women will chant: "We know wha[illegible] We know who you are. We're watching you."

Cory Beneker of the Victoria centre says the point of the exercise is not to put together a lynch mob.

"It's an alternative, a way for the woman to let the man know that what he did hurt her."

The tactic is only used if the woman who was raped wants to go through with it in order to express her feelings.

The idea, however, is not just to harass the rapist, Beneker said.

She said efforts are made to let the man know the women are concerned about his actions and that there are ways for him to deal with his problem.

"The idea is not to tell him what a horrible person he is, but that he has a problem and what to do about it."

She says the Victoria centre has come close to using the confrontation tactic but backed off when the rape case was settled out of court.

"But if a similar situation arises again, it will be used," Beneker said.

There have been three or four confrontations reported in Vancouver since the tactic was first used there about a year ago.

So far none of the men have complained to police.

But Victoria lawyer Don Farquhar said women who engage in the practice are leaving themselves wide open for both criminal and civil action.

And David Wilson, former president of the Victoria Bar Association agreed.

"Certainly they'd be in trouble," Wilson said.

"That kind of activity is not condoned by law."

Farquhar said such demonstrations could lead to a charge of creating a disturbance or, if threats are made, a more serious charge of assault.

There would also be a case for civil action for slander.

"I can see their frustrations," he said.

"But if they want action they should go to the police and not go to someone's house and conduct a trial on the street.

"Regardless how emotional the issue might be it's frightening to think that a group of people consider themselves capable of deciding whether or not an individual has done wrong.

"What they are saying, I suppose, is they don't have faith in the law enforcement system or the courts."

Echoed Wilson: "If that sort of conduct was allowed to start, I don't know where it would end. It would become chaos."

He said the women's concerns are no different from other persons who are victims of crime.

As an example, Wilson said, he has acted for several persons who have lost sons and daughters in traffic mishaps caused by impaired drivers.

"The parents can't understand why the person is charged only with impaired driving. They look at the person and shout 'murderer.' But they don't take the law into their hands."

Soviets balk at Iran's new natural gas price

TEHRAN (CP) — Iran, embroiled in a pricing dispute with the Soviet Union over natural gas exports, says it would rather burn the gas than sell it at the price offered by Moscow.

In what may signal a hardening of its position with Moscow the Islamic revolutionary regime has indicated an end to years of cheap gas exports to the Soviet Union.

Talks on a new pricing agreement were broken off this week when Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar indicated the two sides were far apart in negotiations.

Moinfar, in an interview after suspension of the talks, said Iran is determined to obtain a price pegged to the prevailing rate for oil exports.

"For years the Russians were receiving our gas almost for free," he said. "It was in fact a kind of bribery to keep quiet about the deposed shah's regime.

In addition, the volume of exports has been slashed mainly because Iranian natural gas is a byproduct of crude oil production which has been halved since the Islamic revolution.

The Soviet Union, which resells the gas to Western and Eastern Europe, has balked at the new price. The Soviet Union claims it is in effect doing Iran a favor since the gas is of no use to Iran.

There are persistent reports, however, that domestic production now averages slightly under two million barrels a day.

Reports indicate this is partly the result of tension over the U.S. hostages being held in the embassy here.

But the new leaders had made their oil strategy clear from the outset last year: there was no question of continuing the old policy of intensive production growth. In 1978, this country was extracting 5.1 million barrels a day, but the new ceiling has been set at four million a day.

In other developments related to Iran:

— in Panama City, Iran's deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was admitted Friday to Paitilla Clinic in this Panamian capital where he will be examined to determine if his inflamed spleen should be removed.

— in Tehran, early returns from Iran's first round of elections Friday for a new parliament show the Islamic Republican party, dominated by the conservative Moslem clergy, headed for control over the 270-member legislature.

The party said today that of 26 candidates declared elected by the interior ministry 17 are official party candidates or have its support.

Glenshiel to remain open

Three weeks ago the government announced a plan to move the 60 residents out of the hotel and demolish the building within the next two years.

But residents began a concerted protest last Monday to convince the government to change its mind.

Stuart credits the public's surprising response to the residents' situtation as a major factor in the government's change of heart.

She said the hotel has been deluged with offers of assistance, petitions to save it, and even money.

Stuart called Thursday for a meeting with government representatives.

She said it was vital the question be settled quickly because many residents were very upset.

"I told them it was no good to suggest setting up a committee or something to decide this," Stuart said today.

"They had to make a decision quickly. Some of these old people weren't sleeping because they're so worried. Some of them had even packed their bags because they thought they had to get out right away."

The 70-year-old hotel at 606 Douglas was purchased by the NDP government in 1972.

It's now owned by the B.C. Buildings Corporations and is leased by the highways ministry.

Victoria city council's fire prevention committee is meeting Tuesday to consider a relaxation of the fire code standards governing the hotel.

In announcing the closure, the government said the building was beyond economical repair.

"The fabric of the building is gone and it comes no where near meeting building codes," a government offical said.

But Stuart said at the meeting with the ministers, she was told that the controversy arose when Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson presented a list of deficiencies in the building to the fire chief.

Not guilty of arson

John Berton Davidson, 33, was found not guilty Friday by a county court jury of arson in a fire at his mobile home on Florence Lake Road June 16.

The jury deliberated five hours and 30 minutes, returning only once to ask Judge Peter Millward to read the arson section of the Criminal Code.

During the trial, defence counsel Malcolm Macaulay told the jury Davidson may have acted stupidly but not criminally cleaning a carpet stain with gasoline.

Pair saved as boat tips

Two men and a women were rescued after a 38-foot gillnetter, the Alaskan, overturned and sank near Lasqueti Island late Friday afternoon.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre said Richard Listwan and Lawrence Holmes, both of Parksville, and Linda Gordon of Gibson's spent about 15 minutes in the water before they were picked up by a passing vessel, the Lasqueti Gambler.

They were taken to Lasqueti Island and from there transferred by Armed Forces helicopter to Comox where they were admitted to hospital suffering from exposure.

Meanwhile the search has been called off for a man and a woman who went missing after the 35-foot tug Detour sank off Queen Charlotte Islands Wednesday night.

Sacrifice plan

to support their own lending.

—Effective today, on his own authority, the president imposed a $4.62 "conservation fee" on every barrel of imported oil. Consumers will bear the ultimate cost of that fee by paying 10-cents more per gallon of gasoline starting about May 15, when oil now coming into the country reaches that stage. Carter asked Congress eventually to replace this fee with an equivalent gasoline tax.

—There will be increased monitoring of existing, voluntary wage-price guidelines. The staff of the Council on Wage and Price Stability will double. But Carter renewed his total opposition to mandatory wage-price controls.

Critics opened fire on the Carter moves immediately.

"Too little, too late," said Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), Carter's chief rival for the Democratic presidential nomination.

But Carter's package hands Canadian financial authorities some potent political ammunition — hope for a slowdown in future price rises and an excuse if it doesn't happen on schedule.

Handicap ID cards on transit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Handicapped persons are to be issued plastic identification cards entitling them to rides on an upgraded transportation system, an Urban Transportation Authority board meeting was told Friday.

The system will provide rides for a narrower range of handicapped people than the present combination of volunteer organizations and a system operated by the Lions service club.

UTA chairman Jack Volrich said handicapped people must now phone days ahead for transportation that sometimes never comes but he expects the new service will provide reliable next-day service.

Provincial government ministries and agencies who work with the handicapped now are working on a survey of those eligible for the program.

Meanwhile, the board was told that a Victoria experiment under which four regular buses were fitted with special elevators for the handicapped were only used 60 times in the first month of operation.

Balloons go up

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro will release 100 helium-filled balloons carrying sensitive electronic equipment in the Sparwood area as part of weather and atmospheric research for a study into the feasibility of building a coal-burning power plant in the East Kootenay.

The balloons will collect meteorological information which is essential for the study of the 600-megawatt plant proposed for a site near Sparwood.

Sentence delay

NELSON (CP) — Sentencing of 19 Sons of Freedom Doukhobor arsonists was postponed Friday to June 4.

The 19 were convicted last month of burning a CP Rail shed Sept. 30 at South Slocan, about 25 kilometres west of Nelson.

Provincial Court Judge Richard D'Andrea said he posptponed sentencing to have more time to consider the case.

REFLECTING on the task before them, a pair of window washers slowly makes tenuous climb up roof of Vancouver's Robson Square courthouse. It takes two workers to weeks to wash roof with special electric swing stage.

Prof not returning to Greece

VANCOUVER (CP) — A professor of education at Simon Fraser University who was charged in Greece last month with maliciously insulting the Greek Orthodox Church says he will not return to his homeland to face the charges.

Dr. A.C. Kazepides said Friday his doctor won't permit him to go because he is suffering from a bleeding ulcer.

"I wanted to go very much," Kazepides said. "I think my presence might have made a difference to my colleagues there."

The charge, filed in absentia, concerns an essay entitled The Ideological Confusion and The Indoctrination of the Young in Greek Education.

The views he expressed in the article are considered by the prosecutor as a threat to the Greek state-church relationship. Kazepides is charged along with nine executive members of the Secondary Teachers Confederation of Greece, who published the essay in their journal.

McKitka appeals three-year term

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ed McKitka, sentenced Friday to three years in penitentiary after being convicted last week of breaching public trust while he was mayor of suburban Surrey, walked smiling from the courthouse after a brief introduction to life behind bars.

"It was really an experience sitting in that cell," said McKitka, confined by sheriff's officers to a holding cell for about four hours while his lawyer applied for his release.

Depending on the outcome of his appeal, not expected for several months, McKitka could be returned to the prison cell to begin the three-year sentence.

Earlier Friday, Justice George Murray of the B.C. Supreme Court sentenced McKitka to three years in the penitentiary for crimes the judge described as "a shameful betrayal" of public trust.

The judge sentenced McKitka to three years on each of four counts and to 15 months on each of three counts. He said the sentences will run concurrently, which means McKitka would be eligible for parole after serving one year.

McKitka is fighting a resolution by Surrey council to remove him from his post as a alderman. Earlier Friday he petitioned the B.C. Supreme Court to set aside the resolution, pending his appeal against the conviction.

At a bail hearing, Mr. Justice J.A. Macdonald of the B.C. Court of Appeal ordered McKitka's release upon his own recognizance, without sureties, in the amount of $10,000. This means no one had to put up the required sum, or guarantee it, but McKitka will be liable in the amount if he fails to surrender himself into custody on the day his appeal hearing begins.

McKitka, 45, was convicted last week of seven criminal charges related to land matters, including breaches of trust, demanding benefits and threatening a Surrey alderman.

Prosecutor John Hall, by extensive use of wiretap evidence, proved to the jury's satisfaction that McKitka abused his office by demanding benefits from developers for providing them with confidential zoning information.

In his remarks at the sentencing, Justice Murray reminded McKitka that, as an elected official, he had taken upon himself the public trust.

"You betrayed that trust in a most shameful manner," the judge said.

The judge said he listened to the testimony of a succession of "sincere character witnesses," but told McKitka: "Throughout your time as mayor you were completely amoral in respect to the solemn duties of that office."

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Albert Einstein Peace Prize Foundation chose Swedish disarmament proponent Alva Reimer Myrdal Thursday as the first winner of its annual $50,000 award.

Basketball court verdict started a prison career

VANCOUVER (CP) — Basketball got J. A. (Wink) Willox into jail 32 years ago and opened a career for him.

Willox retired this week as head of the B.C. Borstal Association.

Basketball started it, he says, because as a referee, he met people at the University of B.C. who asked him if he would see what the young men, aged 18 to 22, at the New Haven minimum correction centre needed in the way of a basketball coach.

That was in February, 1948.

"I'd never been in jail before," said Willox, who dropped out of school while in his teens because he had to make his own living and help his family.

"Nobody spoke to me except the head man. So I went back on another Saturday and spoke to the boys. I decided I'd coach them myself, then we got into softball and a little track and I was going back every Saturday."

He was asked to take on the job of supervisor — "a glorified guard, really," — before the year ended. He did that for 11 years.

He then moved to the Parole Board, where for the first time, he was making a confortable living.

But it wasn't long before he was asked to take a year's leave of absence to take over the troubled Borstal association — a position he has held for 17 years.

A prisoner parolled into the Borstal system spends a maximum of three months at the association's boarding home while sponsors help him get a job in the community. Parolees are aged 16 to 23, with a better-than-average chance at rehabilitation.

But Willox doesn't like what's happened in the 32 years he's worked with nearly 1,700 young men.

"The eyes are now on programs, not people," he says. "People are put into programs but someone who needs something else can't fit into that program. The idea now is that if you go one, two, three through the program you're out.

And he feels prison terms now are too short to give the staff a chance to help.

"Take a 19-year-old who's been given two months for stealing from Woodward's food floor.

"He gets out (of prison). They give him 50 cents to get back to Vancouver and he's still hungry. And we wonder why (he steals again)."

The end of old-growth

The first step towards solving almost any deficiency, is recognizing and then admitting that there is a problem. That is precisely what Forests Minister Tom Waterland has done this week with the tabling of the province's first forestry resource analysis and five-year program. Without alarmist warnings of dire consequences if this or that isn't done, the forestry officials who authored this mammoth document have pinpointed problem areas and avenues of attack to maintain the foundation of B.C.'s economy.

Over the past two years, the provincial government and its forest service have taken the brunt of much criticism concerning forest management and the poor outlook for sustained timber supply in many areas of the province. The government's decision, as indicated in the budget speech earlier this week, to increase expeditures on the forest resource from $147 million last year to $388 million this year and to maintain that level of spending for at least five years, was a good signal that much in the way of research, reforestration, and forest management must be done.

In his detailed report to the Legislature, Waterland outlined the ominous task facing forest managers: maintain logging levels and the economic spin-offs with a resource that is not rejuvenating as fast as it is being cut.

The tremendnous growth of the industry in the past 80 years has been based on abundant supplies of high-quality, old-growth timber. "The physical limitations of those supplies are now in sight," said Waterland. "Wood supply problems lie ahead . . . some in the immediate future and some in the long term."

It is expected that the province's productive forest land base will drop over the coming years from 47.2 million to 37 million hectares, a loss of almost 25 per cent.

The ministry estimates that if nothing was done to improve timber supply and cutting levels were maintained, the loss of merchantable old-growth stock would eventually leave the province with about two-thirds of its present harvest. Considering the economic scope of the forest industry, that would be a severe blow to the province.

So far the government has resisted suggestions of gradually decreasing the amount of wood cut. Instead, the amount of timber to be cut has been set on past levels of harvesting. It amounts to 166,000 hectares or 75 million cubic meters of wood a year.

But obviously that is not enough, as Waterland explains: "To meet the challenges of timber management means an orderly transition from a forest industry based on the harvesting of old-growth to an industry based on the use of well-managed second growth forests. It also means raising future yields by improving the productivity of forest lands, improving the protection of growing stock, and improving the utilization of timber on the forest floor and in the mill."

The minister says this analysis of the forest resource has given the ministry valuable lead time to anticipate problems of timber supply. It's to be hoped the lead time is long enough.

Darwin's humanity diminished

By ROBERT REID

The current television dramatization of Charles Darwin's experiences as a young naturalist on the H.M.S. Beagle illustrates the perennial interest in him. It also demonstrates the process of mythification to which his life has been subjected.

By mythification I do not mean falsification, but biographical modification to construct a heroic symbol of genius, courage in the face of adversity and scientific authority. Any individual's life will follow to some extent the hero myth, since the myth evolves from common human experience.

However, even without historiological modification Darwin's life conformed uncannily to the fundamental hero myth.

Ogres confronted

After whiling away his youth with the simple pleasures of huntin', shootin' and beetle-collectin' he risked the wrath of his family by going on a long journey into the unknown. On the voyage he confronted ogres (Captain FitzRoy in his darker moods; the genocidal gauchos), negotiated the labyrinth of the tropical rain forest, traversed mountains, found symbolic treasures in the form of fossils, and finally reached the goal of enlightenment (evolution theory), which he would "forget" on his return to real life.

He returned home to marry the girl-next-door, and settled down, no more to roam. Being a biological hero he would not lack the mythic faithful beast, having the Galapagian animals which stimulated his thoughts on evolution, T. H. Huxley, "Darwin's Bulldog", and the loyal friends who made him "remember" his heroic enlightenment by persuading him to publish it twenty years later.

The truth, as far as it can be drawn from Darwin's dairies and correspondence, is that he did not ponder the question of evolution until he returned to Britain. Even then he made no mention of it in "The Voyage of the H.M.S. Beagle", fearing to associate himself with an undeveloped concept, which already had attracted opposition when mentioned by others. The Scottish publisher Robert Chambers was forced to withdraw his candidature for the Lord Provostship of Edinburgh because he was rumored to be the anonymous author of a book on evolution.

Darwin's early adventures as a hero, whether distorted by his biographers or not, stand in perplexing contrast to his distinctly unheroic later life. When he settled at Down he was frequently ill, never ventured forth to present his ideas on evolution in public, and only reluctantly published them. Medical historians have diagnosed his illness as a tropical disease, schizophrenia, or chronic mercury poisoning caused by self-dosing with mercuric medicaments recommended by his father, a physician of the old school.

He took these for his sea-sickness on the Beagle, and could not understand why he was sicker at the end of the voyage than at the beginning. Despite his retiring nature the symbolic dimensions of his life increased, until he came to believe in them himself. His original intentions to acknowledge the contributions of Lamarck and some of the British evolutionists were forgotten and he viewed himself as the sole author of evolution theory. One man's myth was another's nemesis: Darwin's success overshadowed Captain FitzRoy's reputation as a naval surveyor, undermined his religious beliefs, and finally brought him to suicide.

Myth impedes

Mythification of an idea and its author impedes intellectual progress. In some of the natural sciences such dogmatization is usually temporary. However, Darwinism would have passed on within twenty years, unaware that his own support would help it to hold sway for another century.

In the last decade enough new evidence has accumulated to challenge seriously the concept of evolution by natural selection, but how much will it take to lift the mountain of Darwinism. Elevation to hero has diminished the humanity of a man, who deserves to be remembered as an outstanding field naturalist and theoretician of his time, and has created obstacles for those who have followed him.

Robert Reid teaches biology at the Univeristy of Victoria. UVic Forum is a joint project of the Victoria Times and UVic, co-ordinated by professor Richard Powers. Opinions expressed are those of the author.

Goons slash hockey's growth

VANCOUVER — There was a beautiful, evocative wire-photo zinging out across the wires last week that captured perfectly the winsome charm of this country.

It was the scene of a hockey coach by name of Punch McLean flinging a 30-gallon garbage can onto the ice because he was displeased with the referee.

What the wirephoto could not show, of course, is that this fine example of Canadian manhood flung the garbage can onto the ice three times during the game before he was finally banished for the night from our national sport.

The portrait of Punch McLean, a cameo of everything that is wrong with a dying sport, comes fittingly just after a team of young Americans — not Canadians — by playing crisp and swift European-style hockey won the Olympic Games gold medal.

Growing in U.S.

It is in the United Sates that the game is growing rapidly — producing those skillful American young men who proved they could outskate the Russians — and it is in Canada that it is dying.

Last year a federal report on amateur hockey showed that the violence and the interference of crazed adults had caused the number of boys registered with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to fall by 15 per cent over the past six years.

Statistics Canada says the number of males between six and 18 declined by only four per cent in the same period.

Larry Regan, the former New York Rangers forward, who is now executive director of the Canada Hockey Review, compiled the report and he found hockey now ranks fifth behind swimming, ice skating, tennis and golf among Canadian sports in terms of participation.

It's a sick fifth. In British Columbia, where the professor of thuggery called Punch McLean is the dominant figure in junior hockey, the boys are fleeing the game.

In the working-class area of Killarney in Vancouver, five years ago there were 635 boys in minor hockey. This season there are 333.

In the Point Grey jurisdiction, there were 526 boys five years ago. Today there are 308.

In the Juan de Fuca league in Victoria, there were 1,140 young hockey players five years ago. Now there are 528. In every league administered by the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association across the province, the tale is the same.

The pro-inspired system, helpfully teaching violence by TV every Saturday night, has turned the kids off.

It is Punch McLean, coach of the New Westminster Bruins, who says "Rough, tough hockey puts asses in seats."

Using that useful philosophy, he took his team to the Memorial Cup finals four straight years and won in 1977 and 1978.

When the Bruins as Canadian champions inherited the right to go to the world junior championships in Finland, Sports Minister Iona Campagnolo was so petrified at what they might do abroad that she laid on briefings from external affairs aides and, in desperation, had Bobby Hull personally lecture the team on behaviour.

It was McLean who instigated the most sickening incident in modern-day hockey. In the final regular season game one year ago next week, with only four seconds left against the Portland Winter Hawks, McLean sent his entire team over the boards to gang-beat the only five Portland players on the ice.

Seven Bruins were charged, were given lengthy suspensions from hockey in provincial court and, missing their goons, the rest of McLean's players are floundering in the basement of their league.

Brass worried

Even the geniuses at the top, who started all this, are beginning to worry. NHL president John Ziegler has hired Bobby Orr as a hockey ambassador assigned to promote clean play.

Orr tells of one small boy who impressed him. "He told me that he loved to play hockey but that he was going to quit playing because he was tired of being knocked down and hit all the time.

Almost 10 years ago, runner Bruce Kidd was criticized for exaggeration when he wrote his book, The Death of Hockey.

And we still have the Punch McLeans of the world tossing garbage cans at referees.

Last-minute juggling

One of the more rational comments about the Princess Marguerite controversy was made to me this week by a professional engineer: "Every car in the junkyard, every ship that's ever been scrapped — at some point someone has made the decision that it's not worth fixing up any more," he said. "Someday someone would have to make that decision about the Marguerite. No ship can sail forever."

The gentleman went on to say, however, that when the time comes for that decision to be made, the owner of the ship or the car involved should engage in some rational-planning so that the decision is made at the best possible time and when an appropriate substitute is waiting to take the junked vehicle's place.

It is on the second part of the argument that the B.C. government must come in for severe criticism. Sentiment aside, the government probably did have good grounds to say that the Maggie was reaching the end of her useful life. She had reached an age where, according to steamships experts, her efficiency was markedly declining, and, with rapidly rising oil prices, she was becoming extremely costly to operate. The need to install sewage holding tanks to meet U.S. environmental standards would have made it especially expensive to refit her for 1980 and 1981.

It must be emphasized that this is the argument that she perhaps is not worth fixing up any more. This is not an argument that she is unsafe. No one in the government has yet provided a whit of evidence to back up this suggestion, although cabinet members were forced into trying to argue it vehemently when it was repeatedly pointed out to them that without some appropriate planning for a substitute, inefficiency was not a good enough reason for scrapping the Maggie.

If the decision that age and inefficiency had caught up with the Maggie was to be made, however, it behooved the government and/or the B.C. Steamships Corp. to come up with an appropriate substitute for the service — a service that was at least as good as the one the Maggie provided, and preferably better.

It is the same as any ordinary individual who, when he decides his car isn't worth fixing up any more, arranges a trade-in for a better car — not for one that can't carry the whole family and won't do the job as well as the one he's getting rid of. The average driver normally keeps his old clunker until he has found a better car that suits his purposes.

Yet that is just what the government didn't do. It made the decision to scrap the Maggie, but it didn't have any suitable replacement lined up. Even after the final decision was made that the Maggie wouldn't sail again, government officials were running about Europe trying to find a substitute. They didn't. And the government ended up with the Queen of Prince Rupert — a ferry that should have stayed on the northern run, that couldn't carry one-half as many people as the Marguerite, that may or may not be able to make the two runs a day that would be needed to keep her capacity anywhere near the Maggie's, and that would herself need extensive refitting to be suitable for the Victoria-Seattle run.

Now the government, at the last possible moment, is scrambling like mad to get itself out of this hole. It has reached the most preliminary agreement with a soon-to-be-set-up, nonprofit society of Victoria businessmen to supplement the Rupert with a jetfoil. The society would lease and operate the jetfoil, making three round-trips per day on the run. At the same time, the society would be given the Maggie to turn into a maritime museum or other suitable tourist attraction.

The proposal obviously does meet the worst flaws in the plan of running the Rupert all alone on the run. Yet the businessmen — hardly any of whom are directly connected with either the ship or transportation industries — are put in a serious bind with regards to the amount of time available for them to plan this service so it can operate properly. Within eight or 10 weeks they will have to establish a society, lease a jet-foil, find a crew, arrange a schedule, set up docking, customs and ticket-selling facilities, and establish financing arrangements to cover any losses that may occur. If they had had a year to plan in, it would have been easy.

Now, with luck, they may be able to do it, so that the tourist season will run smoothly this summer. But if so, it will be no thanks to the government planners who left everything until the very last minute.

And if things go wrong, it is the government who should be blamed, not the group that is trying to do in weeks something that should have taken months.

Ellen Goodman

It's a matter of heart

BOSTON — The two books arrived on my desk within days of each other. Two books that got down to the heart of the matter, to the essential muscle of life. Each was about coronary disease and each was about love — the double role and meaning of this vital organ.

In the first, Heartsounds, Martha Weinman Lear chronicles in honest detail and language life with her 53-year-old doctor husband, from his first heart attack through his slow, unwilling descent into death.

It is painfully vivid, pulsating with his strength and illness, fibrillating with his powerlessness and their mutual pain.

The second, Thursday's Child, by Victoria Poole, is plainer and more upbeat from the cover to the conclusion. This mother writes about her 17-year-old son whose heart disease led to a transplant.

The two end differently. Today Dr. Harold Lear is dead. Sam Poole is now a sophomore at Stanford, living with 50 medications and their endless side-effects, saying, "When you consider the alternative, that's not much."

But what struck me most was not the different endings but the similar feelings. At some moment, each family desperately wanted their doctors to "Do Something!" As Martha Lear wrote, "I cannot make peace with it. I believed that I could but I cannot. Simply to stand by and let his heart, this part that should be a replaceable part, keep slowing down, fizzling out: and then he is gone."

I was sensitive to this, I'm sure, because a few weeks ago the Massachusetts General Hospital decided Not to Do Something, not to do precisely what had saved Sam Poole, precisely what Martha Lear grasped at: heart transplants.

The MGH — satirized as "Man's Greatest Hospital," characterized often as the most prestigious hospital in the world — made a difficult and influential decision not to do heart transplants, because " . . . in an age where technology so pervades the medical community, there is a clear responsibility to evaluate new procedures in terms of the greatest good for the greatest number."

The decision was surprising for many reasons. In medicine, doctors are taught to respond to the pain of the patient in front of them. To Do Something for one Harold Lear, one Sam Poole. At medical research centres, the elite often prefer that "Something" to be "interesting" and innovative, and transplants are both. Often doctors have adopted new procedures first and worried about the consequences later.

Furthermore, the transplant operation is not as risky as it was in 1967 when Christiaan Barnard kept his first patient alive for 18 days. Today at Stanford University, where the heart team has the most experienced and extensive program, 65 per cent of the carefully screened transplants live a year, half are alive after five years.

So, when the MGH talks about the greatest good for the greatest number and turns away from transplants, it is a neon sign of change. It is a blinking announcement of the arrival of the Medical Age of Limits.

The dialogue about "resources" — about allocating time and money and people — is a dialogue about short supply. We have stopped believing that we can do everything — in science, in family life, in government, in industry — and have begun talking about choosing. This is one of medicine's tough choices.

Heart transplants are as limited as heart donors. We can only "harvest" an estimated 1,000 hearts a year for an estimated 15,000 to 75,000 potential patients. Should we then spend $100,000 for one year of life for a successful transplant? How do we comparative-shop the price of that life versus others that might be saved?

Should we use our resources to give a Sam Poole a new heart, or perhaps to improve the procedures and care given to a Dr. Harold Lear? Should we concentrate on giving a Dr. Lear more quality care at the outset, or in providing him with the transplant he finally requested at the end? Is it moral not to do everything we are able to do?

The questions that responsible medical people are dealing with have no right or wrong answers. Increasingly, they have to make judgment calls, close calls. And the answers will course through the lifelines of very real people like the Lears and the Pooles.

Cities of fear

There should be 'something for everybody'

By WOLF VON ECKARDT

The Washington Post

America's most pervasive urban designer is Fear.

Fear-fully designed cities, however, are fearful. There is no place to sit on streets or plazas, for fear that bums or hippies might become comfortable. There are no benches in the parks, for fear that drunks might sleep on them. There are no vendors, for fear they might compete with established stores. There are no street performers, for fear they might become an attractive nuisance. There are no hot dog or fruit stands, for fear of litter.

Years ago, when Bassin's applied for Washington's first sidewalk cafe licence, the Daughters of the American Revolution said they feared that outdoor eating and drinking would encourage prostitution.

Chicago's grand old Buckingham Fountain is surrounded by an electrified fence for fear kids might splash in the water.

In Baltimore, federal judges tried to stop the erection of a sculpture in front of their new courthouse for fear assassins might hide behind it. Don't laugh. That's what the federal judges said.

In recent years, to be sure, a growing number of Americans have come to like ledges you can sit on, park benches, street vendors and artists, sidewalk cafes, fountains and public sculpture. We argue that public spaces, art and amenities attract people downtown and that the more "eyes on the street," as Jane Jacobs put it, the safer the streets become.

Or is that wishful thinking?

Enough well-meant efforts at exterior decoration and designed ambience turned out to be such dismal failures as to plant doubts in the minds of the most ardent Jane Jacobists.

But now we can take heart. We have evidence. It's on film (which is every bit as evident as FBI videotape). "Fear proves itself," says William (Holly) Whyte.

In a superb little book, The Social Life of Small Urban Spaces, Whyte has summarized a decade of meticulous and ingenious research of how people use streets and plazas, what works and what doesn't.

Whyte is one of a small band of generalists who, 22 years ago, began to arrest and reverse the horrendous damage specialists were doing to our damaged cities. Whyte was an editor of Fortune magazine at the time, who, with Jane Jacobs and Grady Clay, was part of a small band who published The Exploding Metropolis.

This book first opened our eyes to the fact that the central city was being "renewed" by architects, planners, politicians, bankers, big businessmen who did not like cities. It pointed out that the surge to suburbia was no romantic Sturm and Drang but, for the most part, a reluctant emigration forced by the absence of decent middle-income housing, affordable mortgage loans and good schools, and nurseries in the city centre. It showed that roughly half the suburbanites would have preferred to commute by public transportation, had there been any, and that high-rise public housing in the ghettos was a disaster.

The most important message in this book was that downtowns must be lively to live, and that live they must because their death would be far too expensive.

"The point . . . is to work with the city. Bedraggled and abused as they are, our downtowns do work. They need help, not wholesale razing . . . The remarkable intricacy and liveliness of downtown can never be created by the abstract logic of a few men. Downtown has had the capability of providing something for everybody only because it has been created by everybody," wrote Jane Jacobs in her contribution to Whyte's book. At the time hardly anyone listened. The idea is just now beginning to sink in.

In his study of small urban spaces, Whyte has now returned to this theme, not with a sermon but a prescription.

He does not tell us what ought to be. He doesn't present pretty but untested designs or the computerized hypothesizing and statistical juggiery that usually passes for urban research. He does what real, as opposed to social or behavioral, scientists do: He observes. Often he records observations with absolute accuracy and a stamina far beyond human endurance by employing time-lapse or slow-motion cameras running for as long as 48 hours.

This method often yields surprising discoveries and will surely soon become an indispensable tool of city planning.

The merchants along Cleveland's Euclid Avenue, for instance, insisted that curb parking in front of their stores was essential to their economic survival. Time-lapse cameras, mounted above the avenue, produced a film which showed cars flitting to the curb and ejecting their drivers who would then, in the jerky fashion of old flicks, rush for blocks up and down the avenue and disappear in side streets. Not one entered a store.

As to planning places with fear and distrust, Whyte's observations show that planners get what they are looking for. The fear is mostly of "undersirables."

"They are not themselves much of a problem," he says. "It is the measures taken to combat them that is the problem. Many businessmen have an almost obsessive fear that if a place is attractive to people it might attract undesirable people. So it is made unattractive. There is to be no loitering, no eating, no sitting. So it is that benches are made too short to sleep on, that spikes are put in ledges; most important, many needed spaces are not provided at all, or the plans for them are scuttled.

"Who are the undesirables? For most businessmen, curiously, they are not muggers, dope dealers, or truly dangerous people. They are the winos, derelicts who drink out of half-pint bottles in paper bags — the most harmless of the city's marginal people.

"For retailers, the list of the undesirables is considerably more inclusive: the bag women, people who act strangely in public, 'hippies,' teen-agers, older people, street musicians, vendors of all kinds . . .

"The best way to handle the problems of undesirables is to make a place attractive to everyone else. The record is overwhelmingly positive on this score. With few exceptions, plazas and smaller parks in most central business districts are probably as safe a place as you can find during the times that people use them."

Won't outdoor chairs be stolen?

The New York Metropolitan Museum of Art provides some 200 chairs alongside its front steps, which people can move in or out of the sun, to join others or to enjoy privacy. The chairs are out 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The Met figured that it is cheaper to trust people and buy replacements periodically than to have guards gather the chairs every night. And that's the way it has worked out. There is little vandalism.

There are startling findings and lessons on virtually every page of Whyte's manual. The most startled readers will be the architects of some of these small urban spaces. Real people usually behave differently than the pin-headed little figures on their drawings.

Letters to the editor

I am writing regarding your front page item of the Times, Feb. 26, titled "United Way blasts welfare". I have done a survey on welfare recipients in Victoria, and agree with the United Way report that these recipients are living below poverty level, but not just "most" recipients, all of them. The figures are definitely not misleading as Grace McCarthy states.

In my survey, I used Victoria rents, not Vancouver, as a basis for shelter costs, and I included special benefits such as Family Allowance, Renter's Credit, and Child Tax Credit. Even with all of these benefits together, welfare recipients are still below poverty level.

Here is such an example: A single mom and 2 kids (boys 12 and 16)

Welfare rates (max.) for rent and all utilities — $325 per month
Welfare rates (max.) for food and all other necessities — $270 per month
Family Allowance (Dec. 1979) —$40 per month
Total money per month —$635 per month
Welfare and Family Allowance total per year — $7620
Child Tax Credit per year — $ 436.00
Renter's Credit per year — $ 150.00
Total income per year — $8206.00
1979 poverty level for year for 3 people — $9792.00

This family would be living below poverty level by: $1586.00 per year

Of course, no one would divide the Renter's Credit and Child Tax Credit by 12 months and use it as part of their monthly income. This would be totally unreasonable. Because there is no more Special Needs Allowance available from Welfare, these credits would be used for special needs such as clothing, furniture, repairing appliances, etc. This then takes the family back to an income of $595 per month from Welfare, and $40 a month from Family Allowance, or $7620 per year, which is stll below poverty level by $2172 per year.

This welfare family is allowed $325/mo. max. for rent and utilities, plus $270 support for all other necessities. In the Victoria area, a three bedroom apartment would cost at least $350/month. This would leave this family $245.00 plus $40 Family Allowance, totalling $285 per month to buy groceries and all other needs such as drug store needs, transportation, laundry, plus clothing.

Here is what the consumer department states as a low cost food plan for this family for August, 1979:

Woman — $ 73.92
Boy 12 — 87.89
Boy 6 — 78.13
Total food cost per month — $239.94
Money left after food costs $45.06

These food costs would use all extra money, but since the welfare would "apprehend" these kids if they weren't wearing shoes, boots, coats, etc., less money is spent on food, since that is the only place where the money could be taken from. Then the "welfare bums" are blamed for not feeding their kids properly.

If our kids are deprived of a decent level of living now, how can we expect them to mature and be able to want to even try to help themselves in the future? Without a guaranteed annual income at least equal to poverty levels, our kids' future looks pretty bleak. I hope that I'm not around when my kids are old enough to realize that we lived in poverty because our welfare system didn't care about their future — or maybe we should just "blame the kids for being born." This sounds as good as Ms. McCarthy's statements made in your paper. — F. Shannon, 615 Chatham.

Self-sufficient

I would like to commend Paul Minvielle for his excellent articles on farming on the Saanich Peninsula which appeared in the Times January 29, 30 and 31. The points he makes about how hard it is for our farmers to survive are well taken.

I would like to follow up on the point of Vancouver Island being self-sufficient in fruits and vegetables. This will only be possible when three things happen.

First, the general public must be educated to the fact that this is a desirable goal in the long run, but it may cost the consumer a little more in the short term.

Secondly, all available farmland must be preserved and used, and existing farmers and new farmers encouraged to keep their farms in production. And third, the multi-national supermarket chains must refrain from bringing in cheap produce from California which undercuts our local produce. I would like to point out that these "cheap" imports are not really cheap but are surplus produce that California wants to get rid of quickly to keep their price and profits up and so are sold to us for cost or less. Therefore it seems as if it is produced cheaper than ours but it really is not.

When these three things can be achieved, I feel we will have a healthy farming industry on the Saanich Peninsula and healthy local produce in our stores. Let's all start now to make it happen. — Nancy Stuart, Member of the People Food Commission, 3409 Veteran St.

Good theatre

I would like to say how much I have enjoyed the productions presented by the Belfry Theatre. This organization has been responsible for bringing excellent theatre to Victoria and I find it hard to believe that they spend the large amounts quoted by the Inter-municipal Cultural Funding Committee on administration. Simply visiting the theatre, knowing nothing of the management side, it would seem apparent that they are operating on a "shoe-string."

We are fortunate to have a wide range of entertainment in Victoria now and long may it flourish. Let us hope that Mr. Purdy's committee will listen to members of these local arts organizations and produce satisfactory financial solutions. — Janet Simpson, 290 Surrey Road.

Founders of a well-known Vancouver restaurant, featuring fine fare in a warm-like atmosphere, with proven sales of over $1 million annually have a number of franchise opportunities in selected areas of Greater Vancouver and Victoria. COSTLY DRAW

There was a "photo finish" in the British Championship held in Chester last September. Three players tied for first place with 8 points out of 11. They were: N. Bellin, E. Nunn and 14-year-old Nigel Short. The title went to Bellin as he had better median points. Anthony Miles came in fourth with 7½. In the last round, the following game occurred:

WHITE: Short
BLACK: Bellin

1.	P-K4	P-K4
2.	N-KB3	N-QB3
3.	B-N5	P-QR3
4.	B-R4	N-B3

16.	QR-Q1	R-N5
17.	Q-R5	B-N5 (a)
18.	RxB	QxR
19.	B-N3 (b)

(a) Bellin had taken close to two hours and 25 minutes, and had only five minutes left for 23 moves. Nigel, seeing his opponent so short of time, thought he could make short work of it by sacrificing the exchange, as he reckoned he would win a piece after 19. B-N3.

(b) Here White offered a draw which Bellin quickly accepted. Black can save himself momentarily with 19. R-B5. And that is how the 14-year-old boy DID NOT win the championship.

TAKE A CHANCE

The championship of France, held in Courchevel last fall, was won by the 22-year-old Didier Sellos, through better median points. Tied with him was N. Kouatly, both scoring 8 out of 11. Here is a cute short-cut from this event:

BLACK: A. Meinsohn

16.	Q-N3?	N-N5

(a) Black is willing to take a chance!

(b) Thinks he can win the exhange with N-B7ch.

(c) If now 11. N-B7ch, RxN; 12. Q-R, B-K3! and the Queen is trapped.

(d) A sad retreat. If 14. NxQP, NxN; 15. QxN, QxQ; 16. BxQ, BxN.

(e) The Black King's pawn is protected and the Black threatens B-R5. After 17. P-B3, B-R5; 18. B-N5, BxQ; 19. BxQ, N-K6; etc.

The solution to the problem above is:

1. N-N7, BxN3; 2. QxNP mate; or 1. N-N7, BxN2; 2. Q-Q6 mate; or 1. N-N7, RxB; 2. Q-K6 mate; etc.

Old age pension going up

OTTAWA (CP) — Basic old age pensions will rise April 1 to $186.80 from $182.42, the health and welfare department has announced.

A department statement said guaranteed income supplements and spouses allowances will also rise April. The increases are based on the cost of living.

The maximum guaranteed income supplement, paid to poor pensioners on an income-tested scale, will rise to $153.35 from $149.76.

A pensioner receiving the maximum supplement on top of the old agepensions will receive $340.15 by April 1.

The maximum guaranteed income supplement for a married couple, both pensioners, will increase to $127.51 from $124.52.

The maximum spouse's allowance rises to $314.31 from the current $306.94. This allowance is paid to spouses, mostly women, between 60 and 65 who are married to old age security pensioners.

Land publicity vexes Dome

CALGARY (CP) — Dome Petroleum Ltd. has nothing to hide concerning its purchase of a 500-acre site 43 kilometres north of Vancouver.

But Dome president Bill Richards wishes it did.

"I'd like to shoot the guy in our land department who registered it in our name," Richards growled in an interview.

Since news of the Dome purchase came out last year some Vancouver-area groups have expressed concern at the idea of industrial developments on the site at Britannia Beach on Howe Sound.

Reports have speculated that Dome plans a $1.5-billion plant to process and export liquefied petroleum gases and that the Calgary company is trying to negotiate a competitive export price with the B.C. government.

The Britannia Beach site, location of an abandoned copper mine, has also been mentioned as a possible base for Dome's Arctic shipping.

Richards, however, said plans for Britannia Beach are "just a gleam in the eye" and "people are protesting a little in advance."

Stating that Dome has many potential projects under consideration with many different potential locations, Richards said "it's not our intention to go somewhere where we're going to create a great disruption."

"If they don't like us locating there we'll go somewhere else. But I'd hazard a guess, judging by the correspondence I get, that if we announced that we were going somewhere else we'd have equally vociferous protests saying we really shouldn't move."

Purchase of the land, he said, does not mean Dome is committed to developing a LPG plant.

More raise interest rate

As interest rates continued to climb, the Bank of British Columbia and two more mortgage companies announced increases Friday.

The Bank of B.C. said it has increased its prime lending rate by ¾ per cent to 15¾ per cent.

Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. of Toronto said it has raised its two-to five-year rates by one per cent to 15.75 per cent, and Canada Trustco Mortgage Co., of London, Ont., increased its rates for one- and two-year terms by one per cent to 15.5.

Into the 80s in great financial shape.

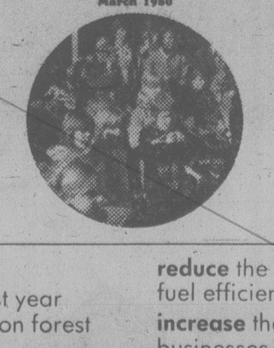
in British Columbia



British Columbia
Budget
March 1980

Sound financial management can provide the programs British Columbia needs . . . and a strong economy to pay for those programs.

This year's Provincial Budget provides:

$1.55 billion for health care and the most extensive hospital construction program in British Columbia's history.

$388 million to cover the first year costs of a five-year $1.4 billion forest management program.

$10 million for an Energy Development Agency to find alternatives to fossil fuels and help British Columbia to become self-sufficient in energy needs.

$30 million for the first Dental Care Assistance program.

$613 million for transportation and highways including $100 million for an accelerated highway construction and maintenance program.

$48.4 million direct tax reduction in ten fields ranging from income tax to the pr[illegible]

$176.2 million—a 24% increase—for municipal governments through the Revenue Sharing Fund.

$69 million as the provincial share of Urban Transit costs.

But the big cash benefits are not all the benefits sound budgeting can bring. Good financial management enables the government this year to: reduce the sales tax from 4% to 2% on fuel efficient new cars.

increase Home-Owner Grants for senior citizens to $630 a year.

increase the amount of aid to small businesses.

reduce the cost of energy conserving equipment by removing the sales tax.

provide $6.5 million for park development in British Columbia this year.

and add $4.5 million to the Employment Opportunity Program for young people.

These are just a few of the highlights of the first Budget to guide us into the 1980s. For the full text and all the details, write:

Revenge can be so sweet

CALGARY — Victoria eliminated defending champion St. Mary's Huskies from the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union men's basketball tournament and no one enjoyed it more than Viking coach Ken Shields.

The Vikings did it up right. Dominating virtually all aspects of the game, Victoria hammered St. Mary's 91-75 Friday night to advance to today's final against Brandon Bobcats, another power from the West.

Brandon beat Winnipeg Wesmen 85-81 in the other semi-final to set the stage for the first all-Western championship game in CIAU history.

Forward Reni Dolcetti played a solid inside game, scoring 32 points for the No. 2-ranked Vikings. Billy Turney-Loos added 24 and Ted Anderson 15.

The Huskies, who trailed 47-39 at the half, got 18 points from Ron Blommers, 15 from Rick Plato and 14 from Ross Quackenbush.

"It's very sweet revenge," said Shields, who had seen St. Mary's knock his teams out in the last four years. "They beat me twice when I was at Laurentian and then twice at Victoria."

Huskies also defeated Victoria in a meeting in the Calgary Classic two seasons ago.

Sheilds said Dolcetti "played a super game" and he was "very pleased with our defence."

"It was exactly the type of game I thought it would be."

The six-foot-eight Dolcetti, completing his collegiate career, hit on 14 of his 20 field goal attempts and also hauled down 12 rebounds.

Gerald Kazanowski scored nine points and pulled in eight rebounds.

Vikings hit on 51 per cent from the field and 69 per cent from the free-throw line while St. Mary's, constantly harried by Victoria's hard-working defence, managed only 43 per cent success on their field goal shots.

Vikings dominated the boards, picking off 43 compared to Huskies' 28 rebounds.

In the Brandon-Winnipeg game, the Bobcats jumped to a 45-32 half-time lead but Winnipeg fought back to trail by four points going into the final minutes. Brandon guard Fred Lee then began scoring from outside to spoil the Wesmen's comeback attempt. Lee finished with 30 points.

Devon Daley led Winnipeg with 24 points. Bob Magel and Scott Greer added 14 and 13 points, respectively.

"It was lucky for us that we built up such a good lead," said Brandon coach Jerry Hemmings. "It looked like some of the kids missed their wakeup call in the second half."

In the consolation semi-finals, York Yeomen downed Calgary Dinosaurs 88-76 and Concordia Stingers defeated Windsor Lancers 96-90.

York and Calgary entered the second half tied at 46 but the Dinosaurs faded in the stretch as York pulled ahead by 10 points in the final two minutes. David Coulthard sparked the Yeomen with 23 points and Bo Polech added 16. Fred Koepke with 20 and Karl Tilleman with 16 replied for Calgary.

The Stingers, ahead 45-41 at the half, received 26 points from Leon Bynoe and 20 from Doug Whaley. Vince Landry led Windsor with 18 points, followed by Phil Hermanutz who had 16.

St. Mary's and Winnipeg met today to decide third place while York and Concordia played in the consolation final.

Canadiens, Canucks and two born losers?

One week's work and it wasn't that long ago that everybody was worrying about the sad state of the Montreal Canadiens. They had completed a terrible road trip (for them), had lost six in a row and were something less than ordinary. The coaching problems were far from settled. Claude Ruel wasn't certain he wanted to stick around and take the flak that Boom Boom Geoffrion had been absorbing. The Montreal fans were mumbling in their distress. And it was a question how far down the ladder the Canadiens would tumble before they hit bottom.

That was a few months ago. Has anyone noticed lately that the Canadiens are on the way back? They beat Minnesota Wednesday night for their seventh straight victory and their 10th game without defeat. And they have been doing much of it while hurting bad, or much worse than they were when they were losing earlier.

They played without their three top defenceman Monday and three that many feel are the best in the game — Larry Robinson, Serge Savard and Guy Lapointe.

Before that, Guy Lafleur was out of action and without Lafleur the Canadiens are just another hockey club. Right? Wrong. Other players, given the chance, have quickly picked up the slack and now the Canadiens are moving in on the over-all leaders. Not that they have much hope of catching all-conquering Philadelphia, but they could pass Boston while the surprising Buffalo Sabres aren't completely out of sight

So all is well? Basically, with a minor problem. If it wasn't bad enough that Lafleur may have been slowed up by his injury, the Canadians have learned that Savard is out for the season. What was thought to be a bad bruise has turned out to be a broken ankle. Robinson is also on the shelf because of injuries while Lapointe is in a spot of bother with his coach. Lapointe, for whatever reason, failed to show up at practice one day this week and Ruel responded by leaving him out of the lineup with the terse comment: "I'm the boss here and I put the 19 players I want into the lineup. It's my privilege"

But that could be just a normal upset. Ruel basically has done a good job and if there is one club other NHL teams don't want to meet in the early NHL playoff rounds, it is the Canadiens. Barton Bradley, the Boston scout, was overheard on VI 90 the other night expressing just that fear. In the finals fine, but not before then, because the Canadiens still are the team to beat in Bradley's, and Boston's, opinion.

And would you believe it — the Vancouver Canucks who are given up for dead every week, especially a week ago when they were buried 9-3 by Atlanta Flames — are in line for a playoff spot? Just when someone throws another shovelful of dirt on them, they snap back. They now are 16th (and last) but have a longshot chance of jumping all the way to 12th!

It doesn't appear to make sense — the Canucks having had as much trouble as they have had — but it's true.

The shocker is that Los Angeles, in 12th place, has hit the skids. The Kings have won only six of their last 28 games and after such a fine begining too, and are only six points ahead of the Canucks, the Canucks having three games in hand.

Hartford is the other surprise. Proving the best of the WHA clubs, the Whalers, in 13th, are crowding the Kings and have four games in hand.

Pittsburgh, in 14th, has a five-point bulge on the Canucks but is struggling, as is 15th-ranked Detroit.

Of course, Quebec, Washington and Edmonton are also interested in the playoff stakses and are not too far away either. Matter of fact, before Friday's games there was only nine points between 12th-ranked Los Angeles and 19th Edmonton.

It boils down to a battle royal.

Otherwise, I see where harness driver Joe Hudon racked up win No. 1,000 last week at Cloverdale Raceway while up the road at Ex Park more than 800 thoroughbreds are in training for the B.C. Jockey Club season's opener, April 14. The Ex Park season will run 114 days and with a Victorian, Wayne Isbister, cast in the role of defending leading trainer with 55 wins. Isbister has 22 head on the grounds . . . and, for racing buffs, track works may be found in the mainland dailies.

But the story I like is about two losers who went to Reno and Santa Anita for a bit of an investment vacation. They wagered going and coming, on everything that Reno and Santa Anita could offer, bet on tossing objects into a waste paper basket on long evenings in a motel, picked NHL winners, which proved easier than the picking the ponies; and even wagered on which one's luggage would be the first down the ramp at the airport.

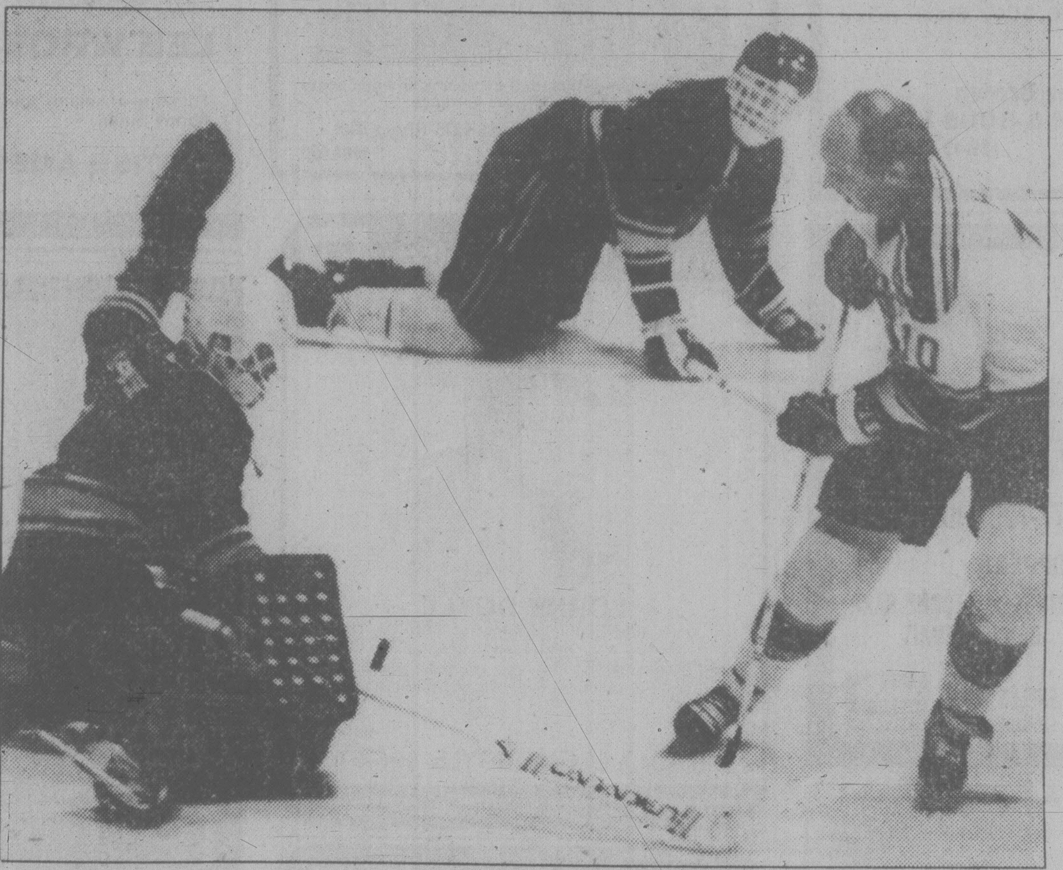
Born losers? They sure were. Both of them.

Their luggage went on to Phoenix!

Olympic 'obligation'

LONDON (AP) — The British Olympic Association told Members of Parliament Saturday it has an obligation to support the Olympic Games in Moscow.

It also declared that alternative games, as suggested by U.S. President Carter, are impossible.



MAKING SAVE against Dennis Hull of Old Stars is goalie Ted Spouse, who was named outstanding player for Victoria Kinks in entertaining exhibition hockey game Friday night at Memorial Arena.

Old Stars still have fun

A gang of aging hockey players showed about 3,500 fans at Memorial Arena a thing or two Friday night.

The Labatt's NHL Old Stars, led by Eddie (The Entertainer) Shack, took on the Victoria Kinks from the Racquet Club and demonstrated:

—That the pressure of big league hockey hasn't dulled their enjoyment of the game;

—That age may have slowed them a half-step but they can still make all the moves;

—That Shack still skates with his head down.

It was by all standards a first-class offering of hockey entertainment — for the Old Stars as much as the crowd. You had only to look at the faces of the players to see that. It was grins from one end of the ice to the other.

The score? Nobody knows. The most reliable count had it 10-3 for the Old Stars but that included one that goalie Marv Edwards purposely scored on himself. In any case, they wiped out the numbers on the scoreboard and started at 0-0 for the third period.

You got the impression the Old Stars — among them Bob Nevin, Mike Pellyck, Sid Smith, Norm Ullman, Andy Bathgate, Harry Howell, Pierre Pilote, Dennis Hull and Jim Pappin — could have scored a bushel. So why didn't they?

One good reason was Kinks' goalie Ted Spouse, who earned one of the Labatt player-of-the-awards. The other went to Bathgate for his stick-handling wizardry.

A second reason was simply that the Old Stars were having too much fun clowning. Shack played the lead here.

Thirdly, they didn't bother to register several Old Star goals on the scoreboard. It would have been superfluous anyway.

Shack won the acting award for, among others, his impersonation of a goaltender in the second period. Edwards loved it. He got a goal.

Edwards got another one when he and Spouse traded teams midway through the game, the usual sporting gesture in such affairs. This one produced a twist, though, when Edwards made a save, collared the puck, shot it into the Victoria goal and skated back to his own net.

Best skill display of the night was by Ullman. While his mates took time out for refreshments, he succeeded in keeping the puck away from the Kinks until somebody tackled him. Otherwise, the chase might still be going on.

Quick whistle gives Canadiens comeback victory against Jets

Times News Services

An apparent goal by the Jets was disallowed Friday in the dying seconds of a National Hockey League game against Montreal Canadiens in Winnipeg.

The Winnipeg net was empty and six Jets were swarming the Montreal net when Ron Wilson lifted his own rebound over Denis Herron.

However, referee Ron Fournier ruled that Herron was hurt and he had to quickly whistle the play dead, and the Canadiens hung on for a 4-3 victory before 15,602 fans.

Rejean Houle, appearing in his first game since Jan. 30, when he suffered a broken jaw against Colorado, scored the winning goal at 2:02 of the third period.

Houle's 16th goal of the season capped a Montreal comeback that wiped out the Jet's 3-1 lead.

Guy Lafleur passed an NHL milestone with two goals, numbers 400 and 401 of his career and ended a six-game scorless streak during which he suffered a knee injury.

Bob Gainey had the other Montreal goal.

Scorers for the Jets were Kris Manery, Lyle Moffat and Wilson, all in the first period as Winnipeg took a 3-1 lead. The Canadiens drew even in the second period with two goals.

Montreal coach Claude Ruel was relieved to see his team win. It was the Canadien's 11th straight game without a loss.

Winnipeg coach Tom McVie insisted that his team had scored a legal goal to tie the score.

"A shot was stopped, the puck went down and it went into the net," he said. "If there was a whistle there shouldn't have been one."

Herron said he had been hit on the forehead with a stick when he fell to the ice.

Lafleur, the youngest player in NHL history to reach the 400-goal plateau, started the Montreal comeback by whirling around to slap a bouncing pass from Gilles Lupien. Gainey added a power-play goal to tie the score, 3-3.

In Edmonton, rookie Mark Messier fired two goals in the third period to spark the Edmonton Oilers to a well-deserved 6-4 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks, as the Oilers kept their faint playoff hopes alive.

The win left Edmonton tied for 17th spot in the NHL overall standings, even with Washington and one point behind the idle Vancouver Canucks, who hold down the 16th and final playoff position.

Cats face Bighorns

Bob Smith may come back but Victoria coach Jack Shupe will keep 16-year-old Stu Kulak in the lineup when the Cougars face Billings Bighorns in their Western Hockey League meeting at Memorial Arena tonight.

Smith, who sat out Thursday's 3-2 loss to Seattle Breakers because of a charley horse injury, appears to have recovered. A skate this morning was to determine if he's ready to play tonight.

If he returns, Shupe will sit out another Cougar forward to keep Kulak in the lineup. The youngster, an affiliate who played for Sherwood Park in the Alberta Junior League, turned in a solid performance in his WHL debut Thursday but will return home after the weekend because of education commitments.

Another player recalled from Sherwood Park, 17-year-old defenceman Jerry Heikkila may get his first taste of WHL action Sunday when the Cougars visit New Westminster. Heikkila will remain with the Cougars for the balance of the season.

The Bighorns, hoping to overhaul Medicine Hat for third place in the Eastern Division standings, moved to within two points of the Tigers by defeating New Westminster 6-2 in one of three games played Friday. In other games, Brandon tied Saskatoon 4-4 and Lethbridge drew 3-3 with Calgary.

Islanders, Condors gain final

VANCOUVER — Duchess Park Condors of Prince George and defending-champion Nanaimo Islanders, putting Greater Vancouver area contenders into the deep freeze, tangle tonight to determine British Columbia's best high school boys' basketball team after semi-final victories in the 35th annual provincial tournament.

Duchess Park, ranked first prior to the tournament, qualified for the final with a come-from-behind 61-59 victory over Richmond Colts on Friday. The second-ranked Islanders avenged a defeat by Steveston earlier this season by downing the Packers 67-55.

Nanaimo has lost both of its encounters this season with the Condors.

Steveston and Richmond, the Vacouver area's top-ranked teams, will play for third place today.

Richmond's Alan Tait scored 31 points to put Duchess Park in the unaccustomed position of having to come from behind and the Condors did not pull even until six minutes remained.

Guard Karl Bush scored nine of his 17 points in the final stretch to put the Duchess Park ahead.

Nanaimo led Steveston by 19 points in the first half but was hard-pressed to hold off the Packers. Six-foot, six-inch centre Dan Steffes led the Islanders with 26 points.

North Surrey and Gladstone will decide fourth place today after easy victories Friday.

Penticton and McNair, first-round losers Wednesday, will play in the consolation final for fifth place.

Chris Frelich scored eight first-quarter points to spark McNair to an early lead over Cowichan Secondary and hand the Duncan school a 71-41 loss. The Marlins led 30-19 at half time. Frelich and Brad Willock each scored 20 points, while guard Ray Bryant added 18. Gary Stockford scored 13 points for Cowichan.

In other games, Penticton Lakers clipped Courtenay Towhees 63-55, North Surrey defeated Handsworth 72-60, and Gladstone stopped Centennial 55-41.

Forget the past, says coach

Curling roundup

Times News Services

Mark Olson, coach of the Winnipeg Assiniboine Curling Club rink that finished in first place after round-robin play in the world junior men's curling championship in Kitchener, Ont., is, at 22, not much older than the curlers.

But he's much more talkative.

While skip Mert Thompsett was his usual polite but reserved self after sewing up first place with a 7-4 win Friday over Switzerland, Olson didn't bother to disguise his delight.

"We now forget everything we've done up until now and go ahead and pull it through," he said. "We'll just curl rock by rock and not look back."

The Canadian rink finished first even though it shared an 8-1 record with Scotland. However, the Thompsett foursome defeated Andrew McQuistin's Scottish crew in their head-to-head meeting and thereby got the nod.

The second-place Scots defeated the United States 7-6 in an extra end Friday and knocked the Devil's Lake, N.D., rink, led by Scott Dalziel, into third. Fourth and the last semi-finalist is the Swedish rink from Skvarden. It defeated the scrappy Danish foursome 6-4.

In today's semi-finals, Canada met Sweden and the U.S. faced Scotland, with the winners to meet Sunday for the title.

Also in curling . . .

Nova Scotia's Kay Smith stole two in the eighth end and blanked Manitoba the rest of the way to win the 1980 Canadian junior women's curling championship at Charlottetown.

Smith's rink, which ended the week with a 9-2 win-loss record, defeated Manitoba 7-4 in the final.

Saskatchewan, skipped by Cathy Fahlman, and Lana Laucher's British Columbia champions from Victoria, each with 7-3 records, tied for third.

At Saint John, N.B., Garth Strachan and his Manitoba rink won seven games in a row, but it was one too few to prevent Terry McGeary of Moose Jaw, Sask., from winning the Canadian senior men's championship.

McGeary started winning early in the 12-rink round-robin competition and lost only two of 11 games, including one to Strachan's crew. Strachan dropped three extra-end decisions in his first four games and finished 8-3.

Strachan wound up play Friday with a hard, last-rock 6-4 victory over Glen Harper of Duncan. McGreary clinched the title by downing Al Dusseault of Yellowknife 9-4.

Harper's loss left him at 6-5 and in a five-way third-place tie with Alberta, New Brunswick, P.E.I. and Ontario.

At North Bay, Ont., Manitoba and Saskatchewan finished the round-robin portion of the Canadian Police championships tied for first with 9-2 records. The Manitoba rink skipped by Don Glinz of Winnipeg, however, received the the bye into today's final by virtue of his win over Norm Gilbertson's Saskatoon rink Friday morning.

Carl Stoski of Ottawa defeated Gilbertson 7-5 in the final round to finish with an 8-3 record for third place and met Gilbertson in the semi-final.

British Columbia finished with a 6-5 mark.

At Camrose, Alta., Mel Jordan of Vulcan, Alta., won the 1980 Canadian Legion championship by defeating New Brunswick's Bob McNee 8-7 in an extra end. P.E.I. and Manitoba finished 7-2 while B.C., represented by Fred Duncan of Port Alberni, wound up 4-5.

MacNeil returning to Seaspray lineup

Victoria Seasprays, bolstered by the return of Ron MacNeil, get their first look at American opposition Sunday in the Pacific Northwest Field Lacrosse League.

Seasprays, who met Vancouver Burrards at Macdonald Park this afternoon, face Seattle Oak Parlors, the No. 1 ranked U.S. entry in the PNFLL, Sunday at Centennial Stadium, starting at 1:30 p.m.

MacNeil returns to the lineup of the undefeated Victoria team this weekend after missing three weeks because of a rib separation. However, Jeevan Dillon, who suffered a pulled achilles tendon, is a doubtful starter.

Kiwis perform in royal fashion

When it comes to defence, spell it out in royal blue ink.

That's Auckland University's color, and defence seems to be the name of their game in the International Invitational Universities rugby tournament at the University of Victoria.

The experienced Kiwis completed preliminary round-robin action without conceding a point and added to their shutout string Friday by clouting UCLA Bruins 25-0 at UVic's McCoy Road field.

That sent Auckland against Exeter of England in today's finale at Centennial Stadium.

Exeter's ticket into the final wasn't achieved easily. The English side experienced plenty of problems with their UVic hosts before defeating the Vikings 15-9 in overtime.

Peter Drewitt snapped a 9-9 deadlock when he rambled 25 yards for Exeter's tying-breaking try.

Exeter also had problems with UBC Thunderbirds in the final game of the preliminary round played earlier in the day. Teams battled to a scoreless draw, but it wasn't enough to get UBC into the semi-finals.

Auckland completed its preliminary schedule by blanking York Yeoman 15-0 while in other games, UCLA belted Brigham Young 25-3 and the Vikings stopped Berkeley Golden Bears 17-6 with Gary Grant, Randy Rose and Ed McAuley scoring UVic tries.

In consolation semi-finals, Berkeley shut out winless BYU 12-0 and UBC overwhelmed York 48-7.

Vikings faced UCLA in the consolation playoff for third while Berkeley went against UBC in a playoff for fifth place while York and BYU argued for seventh.

Last skating duel for Linda

DORTMUND, West Germany (AP) — American figure skating star Linda Fratianne duelled with arch-rival Anett Poetzsch of East Germany for the last time today.

Their free skating battle on the ice of the Westphalian Hall was to decide the 1980 women's world championship.

The 19-year-old Los Angeles skater is the defending champion but her dream of taking an Olympic gold medal was shattered by the East German last month at Lake Placid. Now she wants to get even before turning professional.

Fratianne goes into the climactic four-minute free skating program trailing her rival, as usual.

Poetzsch took a strong lead in the compulsories and stayed ahead despite a mediocre two-minute program of required moves Friday with 10 ordinals and 86.28 points.

Dagmar Lurz of West Germany, the Olympic bronze medallist, is second with 18 ordinals and 85.34 points, followed by Fratianne, the Olympic silver medallist with 31 ordinals and 83.04 points.

Tracey Wainman of Toronto, the 12-year-old darling of the competition, failed to land one of her jumps but still managed to move up one placing and into 20th spot.

Coming from behind is nothing new for Fratianne. But this time she is handicapped by a sore right ankle.

Poetzsch, also 19, took early leads over Fratianne in the last three world championships and at the Olympics. In 1977 and 1979, Fratianne was able to rally for the title. But in 1978 and then at Lake Placid, Poetzsch held her off.

Fratianne, who is weighing offers to join a professional show and appear in films, was dejected after her two-minute program was not enough to lift her into second place before the finale.

She said she was not optimistic about her chances of defending the title, but was determined to do her best.

"I came here to skate as well as I could," she said. "I haven't got anything to lose."

Both Fratianne and Poetzsch faced a strong challenge from 17-year-old Swiss sensation Denise Biellmann, who underscored her reputation as the world's best free skater by winning the short program of seven required jumps, spins and pirouettes.

Biellmann, however, was seventh in the standings going into the free skating final, also a casualty of the school figure event, where she placed 10th.

On Friday night, a Hungarian couple dethroned the Russian defending champions in the ice dancing in a sensational upset.

Krisztina Regoeczy and Andras Sallay of Budapest, perennial runners-up in world class meets during recent years, finally managed to grab the gold medal ahead of defending-champions and Olympic gold-medallists Natalia Linichuk and Genadi Karponosov.

It was the first ice dancing title for Hungary since the event was added to the program in 1952 and the country's first world skating championship since a pairs triumph in 1949 in Paris.

Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., held on to their fifth-place position with a faultless long program, while Marie McNeil of Halifax and Robert McCall of Dartmouth, N.S., finished 13th in the field of 17.

"I was really quite nervous before the start, but once we got down into the music, I really started to enjoy it," Wighton said. "I kept thinking this is it. We are really skating at the worlds.

"We have to do it. Usually, I don't have time to think, so I must have really been enjoying it."

The judges responded with technical merit marks averaging 5.5 and drew six 5.6 marks for artiste impression.

Wighton said a decision has not been made as to whether the pair will continue to compete.

The fifth-place finish will allow Canada to send three dance couples to next year's world championships.

Fran Karpiuk, Parry earn fivepin awards

Fran Karpiuk and Jim Parry collected the fivepin awards during the 21st week of competition in the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Rattling the pins for a 302 count in her second game, Fran topped the women's division with a 235-302-268 — 805 series rolled in the PO's Mess League at CFB Esquimalt.

Jim opened with a 308 and finished with a 324 tally to earn men's laurels with a 308-235-324 — 867 series in the Wednesday Majors League at Town and Country Lanes.

In addition to winning weekly awards in the 26-week contest, both bowlers have also qualified to compete for trophies and cash in the annual Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Ballendine scores first-round knockout

VERNON — Victoria's Cliff Ballendine continues to hammer out an impressive record in boxing circles.

The 14-year-old Ballendine knocked out his first opponent, Brian Cortez of Seattle, in the 119-pound class at the B.C. Buckskin Gloves championships Friday. Cortez is ranked second in his weight class in Washington State.

Juan de Fuca peewees best

The defence was dynamic as Juan de Fuca won all three games Friday to capture top honors in the Saanich Hornets' peewee football tournament at Royal Athletic Park.

Juan de Fuca didn't yield a point, beating Victoria 8-0, Gordon Head 6-0 and Saanich 6-0.

Tip on grip helps Kathy

RANCHO BERNARDO, Calif. (AP) — Thanks to a timely tip on her putting grip, Kathy Martin's first tour victory is within her grasp.

Firing six birdies, Martin registered the second-lowest round of her eight-year career Friday, shooting a six-under par 66 that gave her a one-stroke lead in the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Rancho Bernardo Inn.

Because of her decision to take a putting lesson Monday, she is threatening to end a winless string spanning 226 tournaments, Martin, whose best finish this year is a tie for 44th, is in position for the biggest payoff of her career.

Steady putting has clearly made the difference for the Thousand Oaks, Calif. resident.

Ignited by a 25-foot putt on her first hole, she fashioned a bogey-free round that gave her a three-under par 139 total and a one stroke lead over defending champion JoAnne Carner.

"I'm the type of person that if I start out well on the first three holes, I usually have a good round," said Martin. During her two rounds, she needed only 27 putts both days.

Tied for third, two strokes back, were Beth Daniel, the 1979 rookie ofthe year, veteran Jane Blalock and Donna Caponi Young. Daniel had a 71, Blalock a 72 and Young a 70.

Len-Bruce-Ben act grabs stage

MIAMI (AP) — By a peculiar set of circumstances, the "Lennie, Brucie and Bennie act" was together again today.

That's the title Bruce Lietzke came up with — to the groans and grimaces of Ben Crenshaw and Leonard Thompson — when asked about that threesome's spectacular play in Friday's second round of the $250,000 Doral Open golf tournament.

Those three, close friends, had a total of 15 birdies and an eagle and had a best-ball of 13 under par in their threesome romp over the 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club. Each shot 68 in the warm, windy weather.

It gave Thompson a share of the second-round lead at seven-under-par 137. Lietzke was a shot back at 138 and Crenshaw was at 139.

"It was phenomenal," Thompson said. "We did make some birdies. It kind of caught on, was contagious. You knew if you went two holes without making birdie, you were going to be hitting last."

Due to their placings in the field, the three were scheduled to be paired together again in the third round — an extremely unusual situation. "This was fun," said Lietzke. "We're looking forward to it again."

Thompson shared the lead with Tommy Valentine, a career non-winner who had to survive a playoff in the qualifying round to gain the last spot in the field. Valentine didn't bogey in his second-round 69.

Lietzke was tied with Dave Eger, who also shot 69.

And Crenshaw, two back, was tied with Jack Nicklaus, England's Mark James and Danny Edwards. Edwards shot 68, James 69 and Nicklaus matched the best round of the day with a 67.

Nicklaus, attempting a comeback from the poorest season of his career, had reeled off 19 consecutive pars before he got it together on his back nine. He played that side in 31.

The two Canadians in the field were well back of the leaders. Dave Barr of Kelowna fired a 71 for a two-day score of 146 whil Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., had his second straight 74-148 and missed the cut.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros, the British Open champ who represents Doral, shot a 73 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 147 — one stroke too high.

Cap Reserves in cup contest

Vancouver Whitecaps' Reserves will play the Vancouver Island All-Stars in the 1980 Victoria Cup soccer match.

The sixth annual match, sponsored by CFAX Radio in co-operation with the Vancouver Island Soccer League and Lower Island Juvenile Association, will be played Friday, March 21 at Royal Athletic Park, starting at 7 p.m.

A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Timmy's Camp Shawnigan Telethon, to be held March 22-23 on Cable 10, and remaining proceeds will go to the Lower Island Juvenile Association.

Tickets will be available at the Memorial Arena box office and from all youth and senior soccer clubs.

Another gala soccer event being planned is the inaugural Gordon Head Jamboree.

The Gordon Head Association, in co-operation with the United Commercial Travellers, will host the Jamboree on March 30.

About 140 teams will be involved, including 50 from within the host association's ranks. Another 50 Victoria teams are expected along with 40 from other B.C. centers and the U.S.

Dennison new Argo

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts have signed Doug Dennison, a six-year running back in the National Football League who spent five seasons with Dallas Cowboys.

Hector dropped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striker Kevin Hector, Vancouver Whitecaps scoring leader last season, will not be rejoining the North American Soccer League team this season, a club spokesman has confirmed.

"I think he saw the writing on the wall," the spokesman said of the 34-year-old player. "He just doesn't fit into our plans this season."

Hector scored 15 goals and earned six assists during regular-season play and added one goal and four assists during playoff matches.

Soviets dig in for two-year stint

cut off, according to this report.

Some Western officials in Moscow estimate that up to 5,000 Soviet soldiers had been killed or wounded in Afghanistan since the Soviets invaded on Dec. 27. U.S. sources estimate that 100 Soviet soldiers are being killed there weekly.

The Soviets' new battle plan by U.S. reckoning, calls for sending an additional two divisons of about 10,000 to 15,000 troops each into Afghanistan soon to start the spring offensive. The buildup will continue until the Soviets have about 130,000 troops in the country, U.S. analysts predict.

Meanwhile, in Moscow, the Kremlin has signaled its willingness to seek a political solution to the crisis in Afghanistan, but the Soviet idea of a peace plan apparently does not include withdrawal of troops.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko announced the U.S.S.R. "can only welcome" a political solution to the continued fighting in Afghanistan. At the the same time, however, he pledged the Kremlin's "utmost assistance and support" to the new regime in Kabul.

Japan has called home its ambassador to Afghanistan to show its displeasure over the Soviet intervention in that country, informed sources said today. Foreign ministry sources said that Ambassador Toshikazu Maeda returned from Kabul last Thursday.

Population clock ticks past 4.5 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mankind reached a new plateau Friday, with the world's population climbing to 4.5 billion for the first time, says the Environmental Fund.

The fund's population clock in Washington ticked off the 4.5 billion mark at 11:42 p.m. PST.

Fund president Justin Blackwelder said about five persons are added to the world's population every two seconds.

It took more than one million years for the world's population to reach one billion. The second billion was added in 120 years, the third in 32 years and the fourth in 15 years.

While there have been spectacular increases in food production in recent years, per capita production has not increased, says the fund. This means there has been an increase in the number of people suffering from malnutrition, and the United Nations estimated that 30 million children under the age of five starved to death last year.

Hudson's Bay Company

by jake banky

This year I do not intend to buy a new car or build a stadium or dig a coal mine in my back yard.

Neither do I plan to start charging the neighborhood dogs a stumpage fee for the use of my trees. I already have a fireplace. With luck, I won't have to go on welfare.

So what does the new provincial budget mean to me, an average sort of salaried slob, afflicted with kids, mortgage payments and a serious affection for beer?

I have calculated that on an annual basis I will recoup $4 on my oil bill, another $4 on my telephone bill and a magnificent $20 on my Hydro bill. That works out to a windfall profit of $28 a year.

A $5.8 billion budget and I get a lousy 28 bucks!

The miserable soul who will get the most out of this budget is one who plans to buy a mobile home, install a wood stove and sit around taking patent medicine for his toothache while considering swapping his Cadillac for a Honda so he can invest the money he saves in a small business venture capital corporation.

Good luck to him.

I'm going to take my $28 and buy enough beer to make me forget the whole thing.

Of all the sharpened sticks being poked at Hugh Curtis' first budget, probably the most annoying for the Socreds was the one wielded by their own colleague, Jack Davis.

In his calm, reasoned, unemotional fashion the aging Rhodes scholar took Curtis to task for reversing the trend set by his predecessor, Evan Wolfe, in the previous four fiscal years.

Listen as the government's resident Untouchable addresses the house:

"For some years now, government spending in this province has been lagging behind the growth of our Gross Provincial Product. Now with this latest budget it is gaining. It is up sharply. If the spending estimates are realized it will approach the high level reached in 1975-76 by the NDP."

Davis had more to say. What about the billion dollars received in unexpected revenue? Why has Curtis given back only $54 million by way of tax cuts?

"Instead of the $54 million allocated by the minister of finance I would give several hundred million dollars a year back to our provincial taxpayers," quoth Davis.

No jolly desk-thumping from government members for that poke in the eye.

Davis didn't stop there. "What about such important projects as a new gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, proper refinancing of B.C. Rail and the purchase of new equipment for our emerging Urban Transit Authority?"

Cabinet ministers rolled their eyes at the ceiling.

Just before concluding his remarks, Davis made use of a rather pregnant turn of phrase.

"I am on this side of the house," he said, "because I believe this party stands for less government rather than more government."

Was that a hint he might be considering a different side of the house?

Heck no, said Smilin' Jack. He intends to work closely with all his colleagues to make sure the government stays on the right track.

Then the lonely figure wandered off down the empty corridor while the bombast and buffoonery jumped back to its normal level in the debate.

Who says this is a heartless government? It has just made a boy's dream come true.

Every lad loves a big, old boat to play with in the tub. And what fun to see the shiny jetfoils whizzing back and forth between Seattle and Victoria.

The boy's name is Sam Bawlf.

Everyone a tourist today

Thousands of Victorians became tourists in their own town today.

All 8,500 tickets were sold for the event by 5 p.m. Friday and throughout the day, moms, dads and their small fry lined up for buses to take in a wide range of attractions.

The participants — the Royal London Wax Museum, Classic Car Museum, Anne Hathaway's Cottage, Sealand and Miniature World — donated their premises for the weekend.

The tour promotion ends Sunday.

After paying expenses for advertising and printing tickets, the Visitors Information Centre estimates it will net more than $20,000 of the $25,500 in receipts for tourist promotion work.

Despite the heavy demand for tickets, no more than 8,500 could be sold because of the long line-ups that would result.

In advance of the mass visit by local citizens, Doris Exton's Grade 4-5 students at Sir James Douglas elementary school toured the attractions as a school field trip.

The youngsters then wrote letters to their guide, Lorraine Cooper, who is marketing officer for the Visitors Information Centre.

They described the visit in vivid language.

Elizabeth MacMillan liked the canopy bed at Anne Hathaway's Cottage.

To wit: "The canopy has a very useful purpose. It was used to keep bugs and mice from falling from the thatched roof into the bed with them."

Some children found Sealand as exciting as a Jaws movie.

David Moulton wrote: "The killer whale's teeth are not for chewing the food, they are for ripping chunks off its prey. After they rip the chunk of meat they just swallow it like it is, bones and all."

He was also impressed by Miniature World, with its model of the CPR and the sparkling diamond mine from Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

Anne Greene noted that a gallon jug at Anne Hathaway's Cottage was used for alcoholic beverages and after someone had gone beyond a certain mark he was considered drunk.

This apparently was the origin of the expression "mind your Ps and Qs," meaning pints and quarts.

Aaron Pollard noted that the jug was made of leather and pitch, giving it is name pitcher.

The trip had been educational, he said, because at Sealand he had seen real octopus eggs and had learned to tell the difference between seals and seal lions.

It's AOK for jetfoil

By AL FORREST

STEELE

An agreement in principle has been reached with Boeing to lease a jetfoil for six months starting May 1, Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele announced today.

"We still have to negotiate a few small points but it looks like it will cost us $3.62 million to lease the Flying Princess for six months," Steele said.

"After that, we will have the option to buy it for $8.5 million, if we wish."

Steele said the complete package should be ready to present to Premier Bill Bennett at a meeting Wedesday.

"We could have final approval by Friday. The B.C. Development Corporation is in Seattle today, talking over the numbers with Boeing."

Steele emphasized that the jetfoil is not being operated by the chamber.

A separate non-profit organization, called Operation Jetfoil, is being formed.

This citizens group will either hire a manager, contract out the management to an experienced company, or invite the B.C. Steamship Corp. — a provincial government agency — to manage the route.

B.C. Steamship operates the Queen of Prince Rupert, which has replaced the Princess Marguerite.

In addition, Steele said, the new Victoria-Seattle run could be just the start for Operation Jetfoil.

"It is not unusual for non-profit organizations to involve themselves in vital services. We could consider obtaining more jetfoils and run them run between Victoria and Vancouver or over to Nanaimo.

"But first we want to see how profitable the Seattle venture is."

He estimates revenues of $5.67 million, at most, for the six months, assuming the craft operates at 70 per cent passenger capacity.

It carries 750 people and fare would be $20 or $25 each way.

Revenue projections can't be precise, because there might be special rates for return tickets and for group excursions.

But there would be an estimated profit of about $2 million, which would be divided between the B.C. Development Corporation, which would provide some seed money, and Operation Jetfoil, which would get the larger share.

All profits would be ploughed back into the operation.

Steele called an emergency meeting of his board of directors Friday to reassure them the chamber would not in any way be financially liable if Operation Jetfoil runs into the red.

"Things happened so fast I didn't have time to clarify that this was not a chamber project. I guess many people just assumed it was because I was making a lot of statements.

"And other people involved included Mel Cooper, Pip Holmes, John Ansell, Alan Emery and Terry Farmer — all past presidents of the chamber. But Operation Jetfoil is a separate entity."

Among the things to be decided is whether to form a provincial non-profit group, a federal non-profit corporation or a federal company offering shares that would be held by a provincial non-profit body.

"We are getting legal advice now and that will be part of the package for Wednesday's meeting," Steele said.

Operation Jetfoil expects to sign a complex deal with Boeing, with the Seattle company assuming all the costs for wages, fuel, spare parts and servicing.

The payment of about $600,000 per month would include all those things as well as the lease amount.

Boeing representative Robin Little was in Victoria Friday for discussions with Steele's group.

Earlier, Little had said Boeing was not interested in leasing out the Flying Princess, she was for sale only. A price of just under $10 million had been mentioned.

But at meetings Friday Little agreed in principle to a six-month lease with option to purchase at $8.5 million after the lease expires.

The Flying Princess is two years old and has been used as a demonstrator model by Boeing.

She would run three-times-a-day between Victoria and Seattle.

Operation Jetfoil will also bid $1 to buy the Princess Marguerite and turn the historic vessel into a Victoria museum. Profits from the jetfoil could be used for conversion work.

Steele said the steering committee established to form Operation Jetfoil is looking for additional recruits.

"Those who set this up are all extremely busy people. We are looking for new blood to help out."

Steele said he hopes to find the time soon to begin a number of additional projects that would be beneficial to Victoria.

Meanwhile, criticism of the decision to use the Rupert on the Seattle run continues. Capt. Arne Davis, western secretary of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, said the planned two-trips-a-day schedule for the small vessel would not attract many visitors.

He charged that the provincial government is deliberately turning the thriving route into a money-loser so it could abandon it completely in 1981.

May 1 start eyed for lease-to-buy jetfoil service

Jodi's what Telethon's all about

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Jodi Rice is 10 years old, likes hockey and baseball and figures he might like to coach a team when he grows up.

He'll probably be pretty good at it too — he's won trophies for being the best fan in a baseball league.

Why does he daydream about coaching instead of playing?

Jodi has cerebral palsy and he's in a wheelchair most of the time, so he wants to do what he thinks he'd do best in whatever sport he ends up in.

But don't feel sorry for him.

He doesn't need pity.

The B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children couldn't have picked a better kid to be their 1980 Timmy for the Camp Shawnigan Telethon.

Bright as a new penny, Jodi is handling his new fame with the familiarity of an old pro.

Is he excited about being on television when the show airs on Channel 10 March 22-23?

"Oh, yes," he says.

He talks excitedly about having to leave the McPherson Playhouse on the opening night of the Telethon to race over to Memorial Arena.

There Jodi will handle the opening faceoff in the Victoria Cougars-New Westminster Bruins game.

Jodi has met lots of people, including politicians and other celebrities, but few things beat meeting a Cougar.

So how or why was he selected to be Timmy?

"They told me a couple of days before the meeting I'd probably be Timmy," Jodi said.

"I wasn't there, so I don't know how they picked me."

Jodi has a big job ahead of him.

He'll be representing Vancouver Island's 3,300 disabled children in the Telethon to raise funds for Camp Shawnigan, the 20-acre Easter Seal camp on Shawnigan Lake.

There are classrooms, dormitories, a gymnasium, a cafeteria, two playfields and tennis courts.

Since the Lions Society bought the former private boys' school in 1978, the facility has been completely refurbished and renovated to accommodate wheelchairs.

About 300 mentally and physically disabled children and adults enjoy a six or eight-day holiday at the camp for less than one-quarter of the actual cost.

But there are still a lot of improvements needed.

More ramps and wheelchair bathrooms are needed, the dormitory needs fireguarding, the electrical system needs upgrading.

The cost will be considerably more than $100,000.

The Lions hope to someday build a specially-equipped indoor pool as well, but they'll have to raise $400,000 first.

The Lions operate 32 Easter Seal buses on the Island, carrying roughly 600 persons every day to special schools, clinics, recreational activities and workshops.

Jodi knows how busy the buses are.

He leaves his school in the George Pearkes Clinic around 3 p.m. and doesn't get to his house at 482 Thetis Crescent in Colwood's Belmont Park until 4:20 or 4:30.

Does it bother him?

Not a bit.

He's too busy living life and he's just happy the bus is there so that he can get to where he's going.

The upcoming Telethon is your chance to show Timmy and his friends how much you admire their zest for living.

The Camp Shawnigan Telethon starts at 8 p.m., March 22, and various groups around the Island are already gearing up to make contributions.

The pledge number is 381-1980, and you can make your pledge a week in advance if you're not going to be around for the telethon.

If you do wait for the weekend, you can pick up the Telethon entertainment on Victoria, Saanich and Urban cablevision channels right up until 5 p.m. March 23.

C of C to run industry body

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce has been awarded a one-year contract to operate the regional industrial development commission.

The chamber will receive $65,000 to run it for 12 months, starting from the day the agreement is signed.

The industrial development commission began in 1977 when chamber director Jeremy McCall urged president Alan Emery to form an organization to do something to increase the number of industrial jobs available in Victoria.

The plan gained widespread community support.

The four core municipalities agreed to fund the office, with the assistance of grants from the provincial ministry of economic development.

But in 1979 the provincial grants expired and industrial development officer Barry Mayhew resigned.

The function was turned over to the capital region district.

Some municipalities expressed concern about plans to hire additional employees at the regional level and urged the capital region district to contract the work out.

The chamber was given a tryout early this year and Friday was awarded a steady contract.

Good turnout seen

Municipal officials in Central Saanich expect a better-than-average turnout for today's election of mayor and two aldermen.

Municipal clerk Fred Durrand predicted between 1,700 to 2,000 of the municipality's 4,691 voters will make the trip to the polls.

Last November just under 1,700 voted.

The polls are open until 8 p.m. and are located at Brentwood elementary, 7085 Wallace Drive, Keating elementary, 6843 Central Saanich and the municipal hall at 1903 Mount Newton Cross Road.

The byelection was called after former Mayor Jean Butler announced early this year she was stepping down for health reasons.

Two aldermen, Dave Hill and Frank Waring are running for mayor and six others are vying for their positions on council.

Dear Abby:

In your reply to Angry in San-Mateo, you wrote that "love generates love."

The late Martin Luther King Jr. showed us that hate generates love, too. In his Stride Toward Freedom, he wrote:

"I can only close the gap in broken community by meeting hate with love. If I meet hate with hate, I become depersonalized, because creation is so designed that my personality can only be fulfilled in the context of community . . . When I love, I restore community . . ."

Arthur H. Prince

Dear Abby:

Recently you ran a letter from a woman who had signed a "Living Will," and was relieved to know that should she ever fall victim to an incurable illness, she would be allowed to die in dignity. I think you should warn your readers the merely signing a Living Will is no guarantee that one's wishes will be carried out. It will also take perseverance on the part of the family.

Last May, my husband died of lung cancer after a very short illness. He had a history of heart disease, and the previous year had suffered a severe stroke that left him partially paralyzed. I feared that, should he suffer heart failure, "heroic measures" might be taken, so he would be "saved" only to suffer more from the cancer. The doctors who had treated him previously were aware that he had signed a Living Will. However, one specialist seemed to view my husband more as a pair of diseased lungs than a whole man, and was determined to save him should heart failure occur. It took days of arguing and button-holing every responsible person I could reach for the instructions of "No Code" to be included on his chart. (The "No Code" signified that no resuscitation team would be summoned.)

If your spouse (or family member) has signed a Living Will, my advice would include:

1) Talk the situation over thoroughly with your family so that there is no doubt in anyone's mind as to your intentions.

2) Discuss this philosophy at length with your family doctor, who will be the admitting doctor and responsible for any instructions to be included on the patient's chart regardless of any specialists who might be called in. Doctors are trained to save lives, and some are unable to make the mental adjustment to a passive course of no action. If the doctor seems reticent or unwilling to follow your wishes, change doctors!

3) Once the patient is admitted to the hospital, make sure the instructions on the chart are in accord with your wishes; keep pestering the doctor until they are.

4) If treatment is being prescribed that is offensive to the patient and family, the family can check the patient out of the hospital without the doctor's release.

Abby, we can die with dignity, but it might take great perseverance on the part of our spouses and family to make sure we are given the opportunity.

Interviewer Wood asking penetrating questions of robot

R2D2 goes commercial

By LON WOOD

He's R2-D2 gone commercial.

Sucking a six-pack of *Trade Mark Reg. Coke, he whirled into the Times newsroom — buzzing and babbling a full range of electronic twitterings.

The interview was short — almost as short as the 29½ seconds it took for 35-odd people to appear out of nowhere and form a semi-circle around him.

"I. . .come. . .from. . . At. . .lan. . .ta . . .Geor. . .gia," the transistorized tin man told the interviewer. "I. . .will. . .be . . .liv. . .ing. . .in. . . Vic. . .tor. . .i. . .a. . . now."

An attempt at determining the objective of his mission did not compute. Suddenly, lights flashed and his dome started spinning. Then he broke into dance — to loud disco emanating from within his cylindrical torso.

Spying a four-year-old waiting for his dad to come home from his dreary office chores, the mechanical huckster wheeled over and attempted a conversation:

"Hello . . .I. . . like . . . little . . . boys . . . don't . . . be . . . afraid," "I am," mumbled the lad before becoming totally speechless.

Earlier the robot visited several Victoria supermarkets, dividing crowds of shoppers like Moses parted the Red Sea.

There were looks of shock, disbelief and embarrassment as people talked back to the inquisitive visitor.

Kids were spellbound, but most were silent until the strange little fellow wheeled himself away. Then they asked their elders, "Where does it sleep? What does it eat? Where does it go on the weekend? How much would one cost?"

Well, the flashy little fellow sleeps at 3934 Quadra — that's where he lives. And his diet is pure juice — electrical power that is, to recharge his 12-volt system. Weekends are spent resting so he can appear all week at club banquets, supermarkets and sundry special events. How much to buy? There's a $10,000 price tag on him — but ordering two would likely cut the unit price somewhat.

So far all he is really lacking is a name. Any suggestions should be sent to Robot Name, care of the Quadra Street address.

Simple to make slippers from granny squares

Knit & chat with May MacLean

A few weeks ago I devoted a column to the uses of granny squares, both knit and crochet, for which I have mimograph instructions, and several readershave asked for the directions for assembling them into slippers.

These are quite simple to make, for a child's size assemble nine small granny squares into a near enough seven inch square, for a lady's size a square about eight or nine inches, and for a man's size about ten inches square.

You can ajust the size of the granny square either by the hook, or by adding another round of crochet, or by leaving a round off. The same applies to the knitted granny square.

After the squares have been assembled into the one larger square, fold it diagonally into a triangle. Neatly sew along the bottom of the triangle which will form the foot or sole of the slipper, then continue joining halfway up the other side, this will form the seam at the back of the heel. Finally, turn down the point of the remaining free portion onto what will be the instep of the slipper, catch with a stitch or two and if you wish, finish off with a pom-pon.

Another way of ajusting the squares to obtain the correct over-all size, if you are just a bit short, for instance say you have a nine inch square and want to make a ten inch square, simple crochet around the other edge for a few rows until it is the desired size. By using a single bold colour. it will give a nice finished look, especially to the turned down part and make the pom-pon the same color.

Of course you can make the same slippers by just using a square of plain garter-stitch, either all in one colour or stripes to use up oddments of wool. This square can be the full size, seven for childrens, eight or nine inches for ladies and ten for men.

Try not to have your crochet too open, use a smaller hook to keep the stitches as close as possible. The knitted granny squares are ideal for these slippers.

There are so many uses for the granny squares and if you have a good idea, and would like to share it with other reader's, I will be glad to include it in future columns.

For those of you that missed the previous column on these granny squares, I have mimograph instructions of both knitted and crochet, and they are fifty cents each along with a stamped self addressed return envelope.

This week's pattern follows along the same lines, except they are not exactly granny squares but crochet motifs joined to form a skirt, vest or bolero.

Just three rounds of crochet make the motif using a double knitting weight of wool and sizes given on the nstruction sheet are from six to twelve years, fitting bust or chest sizes of twenty-four to thirty inches.

To order Leaflet 0773, send 75 cents, for the crochet or knitted granny squares, fifty cents for either, plus a stamped self addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have an envelope or stamp, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: — May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, Quebec, H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to include your stamped return envelope for faster service. All back numbers of my series are available at 75 cents each and catalogue of gift and bazaar Items, 25 cents, plus a stamped return envelope.

Tips for handling tranquillizer fobia

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

My husband is a very tense man. Even when things are running along smoothly at home you can sense his distress. It's strange that even though he's so edgy, he doesn't get really angry. The doctor has prescribed a tranquillizer, but he refuses to take it. He won't believe that it won't do him harm. Can you help me support his doctor's idea?

Mrs. T. T. A.

Dear Mrs. A.:

Many doctors have had this experience. After completely examining a patient, the doctor will prescribe a drug, only to have the patient say, "I don't believe in taking pills" or, "I'd rather see if I can do without pills."

This often leaves a doctor stymied, especially if there is no other approach to a problem. It sometimes takes arduous pressure to budge those people who react to pill-taking as though it were a religious belief. Somehow, they falaciously think that it is a sign of weakness to depend on any drug that is prescribed for them.

This frequently happens when tranquillizing drugs are suggested. Some patients think that they are stigmatized by the need to "quiet down" from emotional and physical tensions. Tranquillizing drugs are quite remarkable when used carefully and judiciously at the discretion of the doctor. They can have a profound and important effect in reducing excessive anxiety and undue tensions.

These drugs represent a tremendous advance in the treatment of severe psychoneurotic states. Often they are used for a short while, until the patient can work out tension-producing problems — with psychological support when necessary.

Much has been written about the dangers of tranquillizers. The dangers lie only in the abuse or overuse of these drugs rather than in their proper use. But wouldn't this be true of most drugs?

When it is pointed out to your husband that taking a tranquillizer casts no greater reflection on his ego structure than taking an antibiotic, he may accept his doctor's suggestion. Undoubtedly, he will benefit from it.

Dear Doctor:

I had a mild attack of flu six weeks ago. I still am so exhausted that I can't get back to a full day's work. Do you think I still have the infection inside me?

Miss W. T.

Dear Miss T.:

I doubt that the bug is "still inside" you. There are other reasons to account for your inertia. A condition known as "post-infectious asthenia," or weakness, frequently follows a bout of flu. Long after the infection has disappeared, the fatigue and devitalization may persist. With extra rest and a nutritious diet, your strength will come back. Pamper yourself a bit!

Dear Doctor: Do you know anything about a new male contraceptive? I hear it is being tried in China.

Mr. W.A.B.

Dear Mr. B.:

A recent report in a Chinese medical journal told of an ongoing study with a new male oral contraceptive. More than 10,000 Chinese men are involved in this study that has been in progress for about four years.

They are using a derivative from cottonseed oil, known as "gossypol." Testing in the United States has confirmed that gossypol prevents the production of viable sperm cells.

When and if all laboratory and all experimental studies in the United States are complete, gossypol may be approved by the FDA for distribution.

Dear Doctor:

I was pressured into sniffing cocaine at a party. I am scared. Does this mean that I can become addicted? I'm 17.

Bruce L., Ohio.

Dear Bruce:

You need have no fear of addiction, having been once pressured into sniffing cocaine. The "addiction" you must break is your relationship with the so-called friends who induced you to embark on a hazardous road that might have led to trouble.

'Too quiet', new cat could really be ill

wonderful world of animals

By FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: We have a nice, quiet, new cat, but I'm just wondering, how do you know when a cat is too quiet? V.I.

Dear V.I.: As a new owner, you're unlikely to know your own pet well enough to determine the difference between what may be normal behavior and abnormal behavior indicating, perhaps, illness. If you had your new cat checked by a veterinarian, call and ask about it. If it wasn't checked when you first got it, it should have been, and definitely should be now because "too quiet" could indeed be a danger signal — a sign of serious illness.

Dear Dr. Miller: Before moving here, I never heard of not giving horses tetanus shots. People around here say their vets never do. Can that be true? I never heard of this before. By the way, I saw a horse die with tetanus, so I know what I'm talking about. T.F.

Dear T.F.: Your local veterinarian's the logical one to answer your question. It's true tetanus is usually recommended because horses are highly susceptible to the tetanus organism and infection with it can, indeed, prove fatal. There may, however, be some localized areas where horses don't seem to encounter tetanus organisms. In that happy event, vaccinations for horses kept locally might not be required.

Dear Dr. Miller: Of all the wild dog species, which is the fastest? R.J.

Dear R.J.: Among the wild canidae, the South American maned wolf, chrysoxyon brachyurras. Compared to the true wolves (canis), this speedster presents a smaller head, a leaner build and longer legs. If a healthy, hurrying, flat-out maned wolf has been accurately timed for speed, I'm unaware of it.

Dear Dr. Miller: When my last pigeon died, this person thought it might have had malaria.

Could this person have been right? Is there such a thing in birds? The pigeon I have now, Stooly, is getting regular poultry scratch. That's good for him, isn't it? P.R.

Dear P.R.: Yes, birds may come down with their own form of malaria. It's transmitted by insects and diagnosis is made by finding a malarial organism in the blood. Chicken scratch as pigeon provision provides inadequate protein. Adding cracked field or cow peas to the ration can adequately round it out.

Dear Dr. Miller: You talk so much about fat dogs, but I never notice that many. Just what percentage of dogs are too fat, anyway? R.R.

Dear R.R.: One in three pet dogs is actually obese and many more are somewhat overweight.

Dear Dr. Miller: Can gerbil food be fed to a pet guinea pig too? It would be simpler. C.D.

Dear C.D.: For the ultimate in a simple diet for both, feed them both fresh guinea pig food. It contains the required vitamin C which the guinea pig must have. If you insist on reversing that and feeding gerbil food to both, you'd have to add vitamin C or a fresh food supplement containing adequate C for the guinea pig's diet.

Cabbage patch problems

jack beastall

There are two problems with cabbage which may be serious in the home garden; one is Club Root, a disease; the other the Cabbage Root Maggot, an insect.

Controls appear simple when reading bulletins on growing cabbage by the acre on a farm, but it is a different matter in the home vegetable plot where seedlings are set out in spaces between other vegetables.

It has always been stressed in this column that home gardeners are not farmers, and that recognized practices designed for an acre of one kind of crop are often not possible, and sometimes not advisable, for a few square metres of soil where fruits, vegetables and ornamentals are mixed.

Club root is caused by a fungous parasite. The spores resist drought and cold temperatures, and have the ability to retain their infections nature in the soil for years. Therefore control is difficult once the disease enters a garden soil.

The parasite makes its home in the delicate roots of a young cabbage seedling and produces the characteristic swellings.

The diseased roots are unable to absorb food to maintain growth, or the required moisture to keep the cells turgid. As a result, the plant is found to wilt during the warmth of daylight hours and appears to return to normal during the cooler period over night. The disease spreads to other normal roots on the plant, the leaves turn yellow, and the plant succumbs.

Known ways of spreading the disease to uncontaminated gardens are seedlings raised in infected soil; soil water reaching the garden from infected gardens; manure from animals which have eaten infected weeds; poorly drained soils which are acid and encourage proliferation of the parasite.

The disease is also spread about the garden by tools, walking on infected areas, animals, and soil dropped from infected plants.

When seed is sown at home, add a small handful of hydrated lime to the soil mixture for a regular 30-cm flat, less for a seed box or pot. When seedlings are planted out, thoroughly mix a handful of hydrated lime in the soil of each planting hole. This is a prevention, not a cure.

Stagnant soil where water lies over winter has to be drained before using for any of the cabbage family. Lime may be needed for two or three years after draining to lower the soil acidity.

Once a garden soil becomes contaminated, no cruciferous plants should be grown for about seven years to starve out the parasite. Home gardeners are often surprised at the number of vegetables, ornamentals and weeds which belong to this, the Mustard Family, or Cruciferae.

Of 57 genera known to be grown in gardens on the N. American continent, a few are Alyssum, Iberis, Nasturtium, Cabbage, Kale, Cauliflower, Brussels Sprouts and Turnips.

As I discovered when I purchased diseased cabbage seedlings, one has to learn the botanical names of the weeds because no two gardeners agree on the common names, and to successfully eradicate the disease from the soil, be able to identify the seedlings as soon as they appear. Cabbage root maggot comes from an egg laid by a small fly on the stem of the cabbage just above soil level. Temperature and weather controls their arrival time, and the presence of the tiny flies is ignored in home gardens if eyesight is good enough to see them.

In areas where winter and spring have a definite dividing line, gardeners are better able to estimate the time of arrival and cover the transplanted seedlings with muslin or cheesecloth.

In other areas, such as here on the West Coast, where February often feels like spring and April can make us wonder if winter has arrived, all we can do is outwit the flies when they arrive.

The eggs are laid on the stem just above soil level to enable the young maggot to quickly enter the soil and start feeding on the cabbage roots. If they cannot reach the soil, our cabbages are safe.

We can outwit the fly by spending a few evenings now making cabbage mats, enough for the number of plants likely to be set out. When these are made from heavy roofing paper or felt, even discarded duroid shingles, carefully handled and stored, they last for many years.

A maggot of this kind just hatched from an egg, cannot travel very far, nor can it live long exposed to the warmth and dryness of the air. It needs the protection of soil and mositure to survive until it reaches roots that are its food.

It has been determined that a mat around each plant 20 cm square (8 inches) is sufficient to keep the young maggots from reaching the soil.

To apply this mat around the stems of the transplanted cabbage, a hole about 3 cm in diameter is punched in the middle with a piece of sharpened water pipe, or cut with a knife, and a slit made from the centre of one edge to the hole.

This gives two flaps that can be spread while the mat is placed on the surface of the soil around the transplants.

The next step is to fill the space between the mat and the cabbage stem where the hole was punched. For this we use the soft plastic vegetable bags we obtain from the market when purchasing fruit and vegetables.

One small bag, or part of a larger one, is packed loosely into the hole, close to the cabbage stem and completely covering the exposed soil. The soft bag will allow the cabbage stem to increase in size as the plant grows.

As the early plantings are harvested the mats are removed, carefully checked for maggots, then placed around later varieties.

Work for week

Prepare to protect peach blossoms from possible night frosts (or dawn frost) with cotton covering, light weight.

Sow seed of tomatoes indoors or greenhouse. Choose early bush types to ripen during August on outdoor plants. Fireball, Amateur, Spitfire give big crops medium size, fine flavored fruits.

Sow seed of cosmos and schizanthus in porch or greenhouse. Prick out early into flats and grow in good light and moderate temperatures.

Fragrant annuals: mignonette, pansy, stock, sweet pea, sweet alyssum, nicotine, sow in closed porch, greenhouse or windowsill containers.

Feed kale, collards and Flower of Spring cabbage with 1 mL of 6-8-6 to each plant. Scratch into surface without disturbing roots.

Continue weeding wherever possible to get on soil; handweed between bulbs and elsewhere to lessen work later.

Prune Buddleia davidi hard back to low new growth.

Prune pink flowering spiraea Anthony Waterer (dwarf) taking out old growth, and shortening all others.

WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Here is a list of the Vitamins and Minerals it contains:

Vitamin A
Thiamin
Choline
Iodine
Potassium
Vitamin E
Riboflavin
Calcium Magnesium
Manganese
Vitamin C
Niacin B6, B12
Phosphorous
Copper
Sodium
Vitamin D
Folid Acid Biotin
Iron
Zinc
d-Panothenic Acid

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

The no nonsense diet is available at these and other leading dealers:

Before the judge

Provincial court Judge William Ostler was told Friday bad feelings between civilians and members of the Canadian Armed Forces triggered a brawl Jan. 12.

Martin William George Kerr, 25, and Christopher Lee Ruyno, 19, pleaded guilty to a joint charge of causing a disturbance by fighting at McDonald's Restaurant, 1742 Island Highway, and were fined $35 each by Judge William Ostler.

Kerr was fined an additional $75 after pleading guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Both are members of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry brigade based at CFB Work Point in Esquimalt.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said about 10 persons were involved in the fight after the two soldiers heard derrogatory remarks from one of the civilians.

Laughton said the soldiers had been called "pongos" prior to the fight.

At one point during the struggle, Kerr struck a woman on the mouth, Laughton added.

He also stated that some civilians have been charged and are scheduled for court appearances in the near future.

"People who taunt you should be ashamed," Oslter told the pair. "But you shouldn't conduct your military operations in a restaurant."

A 22-year-old man caught riding a stolen bicycle was given a three-month jail sentence.

George Hamilton August, of 1147 Quadra, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property after being denied bail on the charge Thursday.

Court was told August was riding a 10-speed along Esquimalt Road near Tyee Road about 8:45 p.m., Thursday, in such a manner that vehicles had to take evasive action to avoid hitting him.

When Victoria police arrived and checked a serial number on the bike, they discovered it had been stolen five days earlier.

August has convictions for causing a disturbance, theft, taking an auto without the owner's consent, breaking and entering, possession of narcotics, and trafficking in narcotics.

A Burnaby man on probation for armed robbery was given 60 days for stealing more than $250 worth of items Nov. 9 from Woodwards.

Charles Allan Bartlett, 27, who pleaded guilty, was given the jail term after Ostler learned he was convicted Sept. 29, 1978, in New Westminster of armed robbery and was jailed four months and placed on 18 months probation.

Bartlett was caught with a pair of jeans valued at $26.95, a black leather coat worth $199.99, and a travel grip valued at $42.

A man who broke into the Greater Victoria Detoxification Centre, at 941 McClure, after he was denied admittance earlier that evening was given a suspended sentence.

Donald Lee Daniels, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to the Tuesday break-in.

Laughton said Daniels was denied entry at the alcoholic treatment facility because it was full.

Daniels broke a basement window, climbed in and was filling a pillowcase with fruits and vegetables when caught by staff members.

Defence lawyer Chris Brennan said Daniels was drunk and under the influence of LSD at the time. "It's clear he went there for help originally," Ostler said. "But there was no room at the inn.'''

He placed Daniels on two years probation, ordered him to report to the Miracle Valley alcoholism treatment program and to perform 200 hours of community service work.

Fined $700 for having care and control of a vehicle while impaired was 37-year-old Gordon George Boland, of 450 Dallas Road.

Boland was involved in a rear-end accident in the 1100-block Esquimlt March 1 and subsequent breath test readings of .26 and .25 were obtained.

He had a previous conviction for the same offence Oct. 22, 1974, when he was fined $400.

Seven more in court for drugs

Seven more persons appeared in Victoria provincial court Friday in connection with drug raids launched in the Victoria area Thursday morning by RCMP and Greater Victoria police forces.

Twenty appeared Thursday in Victoria provincial court before judges Lorne Pearce and Harold Alder and another five were arrested in Vancouver in connection with the alleged sale of one pound of cocaine said to have a street value of $54,000.

Including the seven who were in court for the first time on the drug charges Friday, 14 persons were before Judge William Ostler and two were denied bail.

Remanded in custody until Wednesday for election of their trial methods following unsuccessful attempts at bail were 47-year-old Robert Basil Joseph Saunders, of 412 West Burnside, and 30-year-old Alexander Michael Praymak, of 3110 Irma.

Lindsay Bruce Meyers, 24, of 422 Boleskine, was charged with trafficking in cocaine Oct. 25, Michael Nelson Townsend, 24, of 3140 Washington, and James Stacy Jacek, 23, of 3988 Cedarwood, were charged with trafficking in hashish Aug. 16, Robert Douglas Mandam, 31, of 707 Esquimalt, was charged with possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking Thursday, Norman Christopher Randall, 23, of 29 Cambridge, was charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking and simple possession of cocaine, and Peter Ernest Ekstrom, 27, and Laura Louise Termehr, 20, both of 5197 West Saanich, were jointly charged with possession of marijuana and hashish for the purposes of trafficking Thursday.

In addition Ekstrom was also charged separately with trafficking in cocaine Feb. 14.

Jacek, Termehr, and 20-year-old David Brian Wallace, of 5197 West Saanich, were each released on their own recognizance in the sum of $3,000.

Jacek and Termehr were remanded until Monday while Wallace was remanded until Tuesday for election.

Mandam was also released on $3,000 recognizance but with one or two sureties or a $750 cash deposit. He was remanded until Tuesday for election.

Townsend was ordered released on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,500 with one or two sureties and remanded until Wednesday for election.

Randall was released on $1,500 recognizance with one or two sureties or $750 cash and was remanded to Wednesday for election.

Ekstrom and Meyers were remanded in custody until Monday for bail hearings and possible election.

Victoria blood mini-laboratory urged

The Red Cross wants to establish a mini-lab in Victoria to process blood collected on southern Vancouver Island.

The lab would mean blood collected on the Island could be used more efficiently and hospitals here would have easier access to the blood supply, says Victoria Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage.

He said a proposal for the mini-lab has been put to the National Red Cross office for consideration when it discusses its 1980 budget with the federal and provincial governments.

At present, all blood collected at donor clinics here must be sent to Vancouver for checks and to be broken down into various components.

Hospitals here have to make a daily requisition to the Red Cross blood bank in Vancouver for supplies.

To assure an adequate blood supply, at least 70 per cent of all blood collected in the province must be broken into components, Savage said, and that puts a heavy strain on Lower Mainland donors.

The system also causes some problems for Island hospitals because in cases of emergency blood shortage special transportation arrangements must be made to get blood from Vancouver.

Normally, said Dr. F.M. Wood, consulting pathologist at Royal Jubilee Hospital, the system works well.

He estimates there is about a 10 to 15 per cent loss of blood that becomes outdated or spoiled while waiting for use but says that figure is good compared to some other hospitals.

But, he said, in cases of emergency when the hospital's blood bank hasn't anticipated the need it becomes awkward.

Special air flights ocasionally have to be arranged.

The local Red Cross office has a list of emergency donors for situations when it's impossible to get the proper blood

But if a mini-lab is established here more of those problems would be eliminated.

The proposed lab would be able to check blood donations for diseases like hepatitis which make it unuseable.

17 bids made on 12 city lots

The city has received 17 bids for 12 single-family-zoned building lots on Ryan Street in the Cedar Hill area of Victoria.

The city set an upset price of $32,000 on the properties, but the 12 highest bids came in at an average of nearly $43,500. If it accepts them the city should realize almost $522,000 from the sale.

One company, Swiftsure Developments, entered half a dozen bids for lots and seemed certain of getting four of them after tenders were opened this week.

Bidders will be invited to city hall next week to make their choice, in order of the size of their offers.

Facing judge minus lawyer may not be such a bad idea

By AB KENT

People who represent themselves before the law don't always have a fool for a client, a lawyer's lawyer told students Friday.

Dr. Simon Verdun-Jones, chairman of criminology at Simon Fraser University, said there is no evidence that having a lawyer makes any difference to the outcome of cases.

Despite the rapid rise of legal aid counselling and public defenders in the criminal justice system, Verdun-Jones said in a speech at the University of Victoria, large numbers of people appear in court without counsel.

"There is no evidence they are treated less fairly than those who have secured private or legal aid counsel," he said.

In fact where there is a question of competency, Verdun-Jones added, some research shows the opposite may be true.

"Courts may be more willing to listen to an unrepresented accused than to hear an incompetent lawyer," he explained.

The biggest problem is the lack of research to really define the situation.

Verdun-Jones said there are also indications of other disadvantages to having counsel, among them the fact that the presence of a lawyer tends to prolong cases.

Another factor is that crown counsel tend to present a much tougher case when confronted by opposing lawyers and are more reluctant to drop charges.

He said two studies of conviction rates between persons without lawyers and those who had counsel, showed no difference in verdict, punitive sentence or whether bail was granted.

Verdun-Jones also said the absence of a defence counsel may mean elimination of unnecessary plea-bargaining beforehand.

Some research shows the person unrepresented by a lawyer is likely to be unemployed, casual in appearance and less likely to have been previously involved with the law.

Verdun-Jones said an indigent accused may well feel the whole thing will be over with quicker if he has no counsel since he sees the lawyer as part of an oppressive criminal justice system.

"Native Indians are often of this mind and have no tradition of seeking legal aid," he said.

In most cases, it is the person charged with a summary offence who has no lawyer.

"But studies show a surprising number of accused facing serious charges appear without counsel," he said.

A 1965 survey by the joint committee on legal aid in Ontario showed a large number of indigents refused legal aid — knowing it was available — for these reasons:

-They knew they were guilty.

-They had no confidence in legal aid.

-They thought the court would be prejudicial toward them in sentencing if they had legal aid.

-They were convinced by police there was no need to be represented, saw no need for a lawyer or had a previous conviction.

Verdun-Jones said the American Bar Association, Canadian legal societies and the U.S. president's crime commission all say an accused person is prejudiced by not having counsel.

Some legal authorities consider the absence of counsel in the courtroom a challenge to the adversary system of justice which results in a lesser quality of justice.

Verdun-Jones said more money should be put into the paralegal system so that people may have some form of counsel before having to face the court.

"In my own experience with Indians, a court worker serves better than a lawyer in many cases and it's cheaper," he said.

Computer prying safeguards urged

Vancouver Centre NDP MLA Gary Lauk says the privacy of British Columbians will be endangered unless the government takes steps to ensure its agencies don't have access to personal information stored in the computers of the B.C. Systems Corp.

Lauk, who raised the issue in the legislature Thursday, said that last year during a labor conflict involving B.C. Ferries, B.C. Tel provided confidential information about the accounts of members of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union to the ferry corporation.

During an arbitration board hearing last December, B.C. Tel officials admitted such information had been released improperly but said that steps were being taken to keep such records private in the future.

Outside the house, Lauk said that if a private corporation will give records on an individual to a Crown corporation, what are the regulations governing B.C. Systems Corp. "which is the computer bank information for all of us in B.C. — it shows our medical records and pay records and welfare records and so on."

In question period, Lauk asked Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe what steps he has taken to stop government agencies from having access to the confidential information in the BCSC files.

Wolfe took the question as notice.

Grit blitz starts in west

National Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne plans to visit Royal Roads military college soon.

Lamontagne's visit is part of the federal government's plan to blitz the west with cabinet ministers in a bid to woo voters who rejected the Liberals in last month's federal election.

Labor Minister Gerald Regan is first, arriving to meet B.C. labor organizations, and, as minister of sport and a former hockey player, to take part in the annual Canadian Oldtimers Hockey Association tournament.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde will be here March 18 to discuss energy, oil and natural gas pricing with provincial Energy Minister Bob McClelland.

Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin arrives March 24 to discuss the status of Vancouver's port.

And Trade Minister Ed Lumley will arrive to discuss possible staging in Vancouver of the international transportation exhibition Transpo '86.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, March 16, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pacing is more important than usual; seek opinion of one who cares about you and proved it in recent past. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure in scenario. Accent on administration, collection of data, consultation with one temporarily confined to home or hospital.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will have reason to celebrate. Spotlight on fulfillment of desire, wish that comes true, establishment of solid relationship. Plan ahead for travel, publishing project and enlargement of horizons. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Dig, persist, get to heart of matters where goals, ambitions are concerned. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Career gets boost if aware of fine print — check details, be sure of source material.

PCBs found at mine site

VANCOUVER (CP) — Amax of Canada Ltd. said Friday that tests by the B.C. environment ministry show a quantity of soil at its mine in northwestern B.C. is contaminated by the chemical polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), believed to cause cancer.

Amax president C. A. Born said the contaminated area at the Climax molybdenum mine at Kitsault near Prince George will be fenced off until the soil is removed.

Born said drinking water at the mine has not been affected but additional tests will be conducted.

Amax said the PCBs were apparently spilled from a concentrate dryer when a mine was operated on the site by another company.

The company said about 35 gallons remained in the dryer and that it hired an Edmonton firm to remove the remaining PCBs, the dryer and ancillary equipment.

Amax then contacted the environment ministry, which sampled soil around the dryer site.

"They confirmed soil under the dryer is contaminated with 195 parts per million of PCBs," Born said.

City buildings win two design awards

Two Victoria buildings are among 39 in B.C. selected for special awards for excellence in design by the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, the professional organization of architects.

They are the Royal Roads library designed by Robert F. Harrison and the red brick Waddington building, a new provincial government office complex downtown on Broughton Street.

Hawthorn Mansfield Towers and Eng and Wright were the architects. Wade Williams of Victoria designed the modifications for the building's main tenant, the Victoria Public Library, due to move in the third week of April.

Arthur Erickson's Vancouver firm was honored for six buildings, including the Robson Square courthouse project and the UBC Museum of Anthropology, both in Vancouver.

Refuses treatment, young mother dying

CALGARY (CP) — A mother of three young children is refusing medical treatment in a Calgary hospital as she waits for God's miracle.

Doctors say death will probably arrive first for Shelley Bellaviti, 28, disciple of the Children of God.

She has cancer.

Mrs. Bellaviti, from Calgary, stood a good chance of being cured or at least having years added to her life if she had accepted treatment when the disease was first detected last July.

Her husband Mario, also a sect member, has stood vigil at her bedside since she was admitted to hospital three days ago. The couple's three children, the oldest of whom is 3½ years old, are staying with friends.

Doctors said the woman has never given them permission to conduct tests which would determine the extent of the illness.

Doctors believe Mrs. Bellaviti has Hodgkins' disease, a form of cancer which affects lymph nodes.

Also known as The Family of Love, the sect evolved out of several others in 1969. It has been investigated by police forces in several countries and, at one time, had 120 communes around the world.

Big sale for Blood $

STANDOFF, Alta. (CP) — Merchants in a nearby town started a sale and a used-car dealer advertised "bargains" on Friday after members of the Blood Indian band finished collecting $11 million from the sale of petroleum rights.

Merchants in Cardston started a three-day "spring spectacular" sale and a used-car dealer in Calgary told the Indians through their newspaper they could call him collect for a bargain.

"You don't have to pay for the sawdust in the transmission," said one Blood in the old Indian agency hall, 25 kilometres north of Standoff.

They lined up Thursday and Friday to receive $2,000 each. One family with 16 members received $32,000.

"I couldn't believe this was happening to us when I first heard about it," Dwayne Hoof, 27, of the reservation, said after collecting his $2,000.

"It makes me feel proud to be an Indian. Finally the Indian people are coming out of their shell. We are ready to tell the people that we are the beautiful people and are proud of our golden brown skin."

Tribe members decided overwhelmingly in a mid-December referendum to have the $11 million in gas and oil revenues distributed equally among band members. Residents voted 90 per cent in favor of giving $2,000 to every man woman and child in the 5,500 member tribe, most of whom live on the Blood reservation.

The money is almost half of the $22.8 million paid by oil companies last summer for exploration permits and leases on the reserve.

The rest of the money must, by law, be held in the band account in Ottawa.

'Con against liberation'

OTTAWA (CP) — B.C.'s NDP feminist Rosemary Brown said Friday governments, employers and advertisers are trying to lure women away from the liberation movement by accusing them of destroying the so-called traditional family - working dad, housewife mom and 2.5 children.

Mrs. Brown termed this accusation against feminists a con and a trap aimed at undermining the strides women have made toward equality with men, particularly in the work force.

It is aimed at creating "a stampede of women back into the home, the kitchen, the obsetrical wards."

This was the central message in her speech opening the seventh annual meeting of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, a Toronto-based umbrella organization for more than 100 women's groups across the country.

Strip search review ordered

EDMONTON (CP) — City police chief Robert Lunney has reversed his earlier stand and ordered an immediate internal investigation into the strip search of a 15-year-old girl stopped after a jaywalking violation.

Lunney said Thursday he believes the constable who arrested the girl Tuesday and took her to the station acted correctly because the girl refused to give her name.

PitneyBowes

Professional Sales Career For You

One of the risks in hiring a powerful sales force is that everybody else wants them. But Pitney Bowes sales representatives have several things going for them that few other companies can offer. First, a line of diversified products and systems . . . copiers, postage meters and related equipment that businesses need. Secondly, the products have versatility. They can legitimately cut corporate costs and improve efficiency in a variety of ways, depending on the nature of the business. It is up to the sales representative to learn what the customer's needs are and to develop more effective ways to serve them.

This opportunity is a training position offering a salary and car allowance, plus commission; with a potential for advancement to a full line marketing position.

In addition we have one of the best benefit programs in the industry consisting of non-contributing pension plan, full payment fo illness, group life insurance, dental plan, long term disability insurance and profit sharing.

The quality of our products and the proven need for them give you an inherent selling advantage. But as good as they are, we need people who can dramatically demonstrate their effectiveness.

Previous sales experience is preferred and sales ability is a must.

Prince to declare Zimbabwe free

SALISBURY (CP) — Prince Charles will formally declare Britain's last African colony the independent republic of Zimbabwe at the final hour of April 17, ending nine decades of white minority rule in Rhodesia, it was announced Friday.

The decision to send the Queen's son, heir to the British throne and a member of the Royal Family who is very popular in Rhodesia, is certain to please the region's 230,000 whites.

For blacks, his presence will represent a British recognition of Zimbabwe's first internationally-accepted black minority government, headed by former guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe, designated as prime minister.

British governor, Lord Soames, who restored crown rule in Rhodesia last December for the first time in 15 years to supervise a ceasefire in the seven-year guerrilla war and hold elections, said Friday the independence date is a compromise for Mugabe's ministers who "would have liked some shoulder to lean on" before taking charge of the government.

Mugabe asked the governor to push back the original mid-March date and remain in the country after independence to serve as a stabilizing influence.

During his stay in Salisbury, Soames has faced the constant danger that the Dec. 28 ceasefire would break down.

Film crew dies in north plane crash

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Three members of a Spanish film crew and an Alaskan pilot have died in the crash of a single-engine plane about 20 kilometres south of Shaktoolik, Alaska state troopers said.

There were no survivors.

The Spaniards were filming Marc Boily of Fairbanks, Alaska, a participant in the marathon Iditarod Sled Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome.

Names of the three Spanish victims were not released immediately. The pilot was Warren "Ace" Dodson of Anchorage.

Witnesses said the Cessna 185 was travelling at full speed, about 260 kilometres an hour, when it suddenly nose-dived and crashed onto the snow-covered ground, landing on its back.

The film crew was under contract to Felix Rodrigues, a director of state-owned television in Madrid, said Al Crane, president of the Iditarod trail committee.

A great name in 20th century classical music performance is that of cellist Leonard Rose.

His appearance here tomorrow and Monday as guest soloist with Victoria Symphony Orchestra is one of 100 such performances he undertakes annually in every quarter of the globe.

With Paul Freeman conducting, Rose will be play Schumann's Concerto in A minor, a lyrical and well-loved concertos from cello repertoire.

Freeman will also pursue innovative programming by performing the overture to Colas et Colinette, an opera written by Quesnel, the 18th century sea captain, merchant, poet and composer who spent most of his creative life in Montreal.

The work is believed to be the first Canadian opera and while the score and many of the parts have been lost, contemporary Canadian composer Godfrey Ridout was able to reconstruct the opera from the parts that survived.

Badura-Skoda

Brahms' first symphony, often dubbed Beethoven's tenth is the concluding work.

A week-long celebration of the music of Mozart and his contemporaries begins Sunday, March 23 at University Centre Auditorium with a performance of Haydn's Creation.

Throughout the week following there will be a series of concerts, lectures and workshops.

Special guests for the series are Viennese pianist Paul Badura-Skoda, his wife, Dr. Eva Badura-Skoda who is one of the leading musicologists of the Viennese school, and Lotfi Mansouri, director of the Canadian Opera Company.

The Creation will be performed by the University Chorus and Little Orchestra, directed by George Corwin. The soloists are soprano Iris Fraser, UVic's resident baritone, Bernard Turgeon, and tenor David Astor.

The Purcell String Quartet, UVic faculty artists Paul Kling and Robin Wood, and a number of students will also be participating in this event for which one of the organizers has been the School of Music's Dr. Gordana Lazarevich.

Dr. Lazarevich says that it is hoped to make the event an annual one, focusing each time on a different composer, his music and his era.

"In this first series," she says, "we are showing Mozart in perspective — including some of the written work that has been done on him."

Much of the latter will be included in Mozart in Retrospect. Under this heading lectures and lecture demonstrations will be presented by faculty and graduate students of the School of Music in the music wing's recital hall. These will occupy the morning of March 28 from 9 a.m. to noon and are free to all.

From the public point of view, highlights of the week will include the evening recital Friday March 28 by Badura-Skoda and his second appearance Sunday March 30 when he will perform the Mozart Piano Concerto in C Major K. 503; with Corwin and the Little Orchestra.

Other events in order: A noon recital by students of the School of Music, March 25 and that evening a concert of music by Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven performed by the Purcell Quartet.

The week will also provide a recital by Paul Kling and Robin Wood and a day-long workshop on Mozart and opera with Mansouri directing rehearsals of scenes from The Marriage of Figaro. Dr. Eva Badura-Skoda will give a lecture on "Vocal Cadenzas in the Operas of Mozart".

Relationships between singers and director in defining and interpreting a role will be discussed and demonstrated by Mansouri and Turgeon and this will be followed by performance of the earlier rehearsed Figaro scenes.

A showcase student concert and noon-hour event entitled The Faculty Serenades Mozart are other events in the week-long program.

There is no admission charge for many of the events, including the opera workshop, but admission tickets for this must be obtained from the School of Music general office.

CANADIAN PLAYWRIGHT James Reaney wove into his play Handcuffs a look at both sides of a feud that ultimately led to the massacre of the Donnelly family — known in Canadian history as "The Black Donnellys" of Ontario. Handcuffs is currently being staged tonight through to March 22 (except Sunday) at UVic's Phoenix Theatre. Under direction of Jim Leard, the 20-member cast explores themes of religion, politics and personal rivalry which made up the 30-year saga which ended a century ago. Curtain time each performance is 8 p.m. with tickets at the door or by reserving at 477-4821.

Iseler Singers 'finest'

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A 20-member chamber choir that is unquestionably in the minds of many experts, the finest of its kind in Canada, is to present a single concert in Victoria, Saturday March 22.

The Elmer Iseler Singers, named for their founder-conductor, will appear at University Centre Auditorium under the joint sponsorship of the University of Victoria and McPherson Playhouse Foundation. The program will illustrate the catholicity of their repertoire which ranges from Bach to Acadian folk songs and includes church, as well as secular and popular music of five centuries.

Dr. Iseler was the founder of the famous Festival Singers of Canada, a group that in its 24-year history gained international recognition with tours throughout North America and Europe.

Many prestigious awards and accolades have been conferred on Dr. Iseler during his long career. They include honorary degrees from two Canadian universities, the Silver Medal of Paris — he was the first Canadian to be so honored — and the Order of Canada.

A guest conductor with the Victoria Symphony and Amity Singers this winter he provided one of the season's memorable events. He has conducted and performed with many orchestras around the world, and has had the patronage and support of many of the world's renowned artists such as Aaron Copland, Glenn Gould, Seiji Ozawa, Igor Stravinsky, Harry Somers and Healey Willan.

Excerpts of career on stage

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Joseph Wiseman, a Canadian-born actor, will give an evening of excerpts in Victoria this Monday night from roles he has played on London and New York stages — as well as selections of drama and humor from Yiddish and Jewish literature.

Wiseman, who will appear at Newcombe Auditorium, most recently appeared as the rabbi in Elie Wiesel's Zalmen, or the Madness of God, recently televised over the U.S. Public Broadcasting System.

Wiseman is the first of two visitors being brought to Victoria by Congregation Emmanuel. The second, Dr. Max Vorspan, a social historian, will be here April 22. Ticket information can be obtained by calling 382-0615.

In the evening at 8 at Craigdarroch Castle, works by Beethoven, Mozart, Dukas and others will be presented by an unusual combination consisting of Peter Burris, horn; Eugene Dowling, tuba, and Edward Norman, piano.

If it has occurred to anyone to wonder about the professional fees involved in connection with the excellent free noontime concerts at McPherson Playhouse this season, the answer is that those fees are taken care of by grants from the Music Performance Trust Fund of New York.

Through the Victoria Musicians' Association, Local 247 A.F. of M., the Trust Fund, during the past six months, has contributed $3,000 in fees to Victoria musicians participating in this series.

The funds were supplied by the Recording Companies of America, a public service organization created under agreements with the American Federation of Musicians.

Fine Line Players is presenting an award-winning comedy, Bits and Pieces, by New Yorker Corinne Jacker, as its spring production next week. It will be seen at the Isabel Reader Theatre, Spencer School, Langford, from Wednesday through Saturday at 8 p.m.

Sometimes poignant and often hilarious, the play is presented through a series of 13 scenes. The director is Annie Weeks and in the cast are Mary Jane Von Fintel, Nicholas Van Ruiten, Sue Brown, Debra Smith and Geoff Squarok.

Bastion Theatre artistic director Ed Stephenson and associate director Ronald Ulrich, are holding general interviews in Victoria Monday, Tuesday and Wednsday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., at Bastion offices, 1002 Wharf. The following week they will be doing interviews in Vancouver at the Vancouver Playhouse, 575 Beatty, on the same days and times.

Audition pieces are not necessary but may be presented if desired.

Contact the Bastion office, 386-8301, for an appointment in Victoria. If in Vancouver call the Playhouse at 684-5361.

Billy Bishop Goes to War, the smash hit musical comedy about Canada's most decorated First World War flying ace, starts at the Macpherson Monday and runs until Wedneday.

The B.C.-Alberta touring company is bringing Bishop to McPherson Playhouse while its creators, John Gray and Eric Peterson take it to Washington D.C. for its American debut.

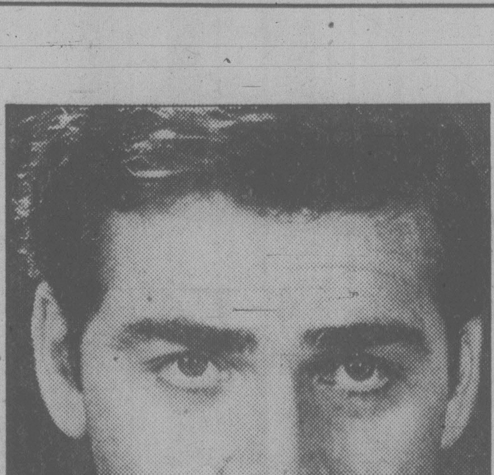
The Chieftains — Ireland's greatest folk musicians — will be in New York on St. Patrick's Day, but they'll do no wearin' o' the green. They have a Monday interview on ABC-TV's Good Morning America — right when the Irish of the Big Apple take to the streets for their parade. A week later they fly to Victoria for one night at the McPherson Playhouse.

Kristy McNichol, who will make her movie debut in Little Darlings now being filmed in Toronto, calls the film old-fashioned. "This movie is so innocent compared to what goes on out there (in California)," says 17-year-old McNichol. "If parents think this is harsh, I'd like them to see what really goes on. Despite McNichol's characterization, the picture received a restricted rating in the U.S. Its Canadian rating is not yet settled. In the film McNichol smokes cigarettes, swears and accepts a bet she can lose her virginity sooner than her co-star, Tatum O'Neal.

Farrah Fawcett has a new role — a try at saving the lives of countless women who may have cancer and not know it. She'll be the next chairman of the American Cancer Society's Women Against Cancer. "I'll try to reach people who otherwise couldn't be reached without me. It will give me a chance to talk about something other than me, me, me."



MacDonald . . . lots of poor actors

Canadians are not in acting for the money, says Dan MacDonald, a Canadian actor, writer and director. There are only six professional Canadian actors making more than $20,000 a year, MacDonald told the Canadian Club in Prince Albert. The Canadian actor's average wage is $5,000 a year. "Either we have a culture or we don't have a culture, but let's make up our minds before they are made up for us by people outside our country who do not have our best interests at heart," he said. MacDonald called for a national arts policy that will allow "Canadian culture to be established by Canadians."

Elvis may be gone, but thanks to the state of show biz technology, he'll be coming out soon with a brand new album of duets with the Statler Brothers, Dolly Parton, and Waylon Jennings. Elvis' longtime producer, Felton Jarvis, and producer Chip Young have been stripping away instrumental and backup vocal tracks in Nashville from a collection of old tapes so more up-to-date voices can be dubbed in and harmonized. They're after Barbra Streisand, Neil Diamond and Paul McCartney as well. Only Kenny Rogers has turned them down.

REMEMBER STANLEY Kubrick's romantic film, Barry Lyndon? If you do you'll also recall the hauntingly beautiful music which accompanied it and won an Academy Award for its performers. That band was the Irish folk group The Chieftains who will be paying a visit to the McPherson Playhouse March 24. The Chieftains in fact, hold some sort of record for audience power, having performed for a live audience of 1.25 million people at a single concert in Dublin's Phoenix Park on the occasion of the visit of Pope John Paul II. The Chieftains only turned professional in 1975 after playing together for almost 20 years. The McPherson Foundation, in presenting this sextet, is introducing a group unique in its devotion to Ireland's history, people, language and musical tradition. Their instruments include the Uillean pipes, Timpan, Irish harp, flute, concertina, Bodhran and tin whistle.

At the moment the Victoria entertainment scene is experiencing spring fever. Along with season wind-downs there is always scrambling to get onto the winter-spring roll call.

Those of us who are not satiated at the end of the ensuing six weeks, will at least appreciate a lull.

Insatiable is the word for a growing number of Victorians who take their pleasure in concert halls and theatres. A long summer intermission is no longer typical of the Victoria scene.

Recognition of the need to relieve the boredom of frequently chilly summer nights, has resulted in first a trickle and now a flood of July-August happenings.

First and most prestigious of these is the Victoria International Festival, which although founded and artistically directed by Vancouver's J.J. Johannesen, is administered locally. The festival is rooted in the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts which annually occupies the campus of St. Michael's University School for six weeks.

The faculty composed of teachers who are also performers, supplies the festival artists.

This year's festival begins mid-July and brings back such favorites of previous summers as pianists Robin McCabe and Bela Siki, double bassist Gary Karr, violinists Dana and Yuri Mazurkevich and Daniel Heifetz and flutist Robert Aitken.

Newcomers to the festival include the renowned English pianist, John Ogdon, and Vancouver bassoonist-impressario George Zukerman.

Among Victoria-based artists who will be participating are violinist Paul Kling, head of the chamber music program in UVic's School of Music, and the Pacific Wind Quintet.

Totally unnecessary was the recent furor invoked by the report of the Arts Advisory Committee for the area's grant-making Intermunicipal Committee.

In the first place, commonsense, if not a disciplined professional approach, should have prompted those concerned to obtain the easily accessible report and read it thoroughly before making public pronouncement.

The Professional Arts Council of Victoria has demonstrated just that approach in a document released recently.

It says in part: "The Professional Arts Council of Victoria commends the cultural funding advisory subcommittee in its efforts to develop an Arts Funding policy for Victoria ... the silent majority of the Arts Community feel very positive towards the advisory subcommittee and its recent report on arts funding."

The press release quotes chairman Eric Macdonald as assuring the subcommittee "that the arts community endorses the subcommittee's efforts and pledges continued co-operation and support ... It is regrettable that a few members of the arts community have created the false impression that the arts groups are out to 'dump Purdy'.

Macdonald concludes by pointing out that "Victoria is on the verge of developing a solid arts policy which is being observed by other municipalities and the Canadian Conference of the Arts."

It seems apparent that in many cases there was insufficient or unsubstantiated information set forth by the applicants. It is therefore wholly proper and should be applauded by every tax-payer, that a committee, given the "very difficult and unpopular task (of) apportionment of municipal arts funds" (PAC statement) should take a tough and thoroughly objective stand.

Why did the subcommittee not investigate where they were in doubt? The question prompts another question: How much time and energy can a volunteer group devote to investigative work when facing the task of studying and assessing 30 submissions amounting to nearly double the amount of money available?

Of course the onus is on the organizations to provide precise, factual briefs that make absolutely clear every aspect of the operation, including future retirement of debt, if any.

In fact, the right of appeal against a decision has been present from the beginning and the snarled and untidy proceedings at this week's Intermunicipal Committee meeting were entirely unnecessary.

It will only take a negative decision from one municipality to cripple seriously, projects of considerable value to the entire area.

JOSE MOLINA is considered by many to be the reigning king of the art of flamenco but the torrid dance style is only one aspect of this exotic artist's performance. While still in his teens he became first dancer with Jose Greco's company and after five years, took the next logical step — the formation of his own company. It is with this company, the Jose Molina Bailes Espanoles, that he comes to Victoria Thursday for a single performance at the McPherson Playhouse. Molina has appeared frequently on the Johnny Carson Tonight Show and the Dr. Joyce Brothers Show, television exposure that has vastly increased his concert audiences.

the galleries

Two new shows are opening at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria Thursday. For those attracted to the vitality and strength of modern American art, there will be a rare opportunity to see a first class selection representing trends and mainstream developments of the last quarter-century.

This show — American Painting 1955-1976 — which comes to the Gallery from the Albright-Knox Gallery in Buffalo, N.Y., is an important one for artists and students as well as one of sustained interest to contemporary art lovers. Wide ranging and diverse, it will remain on view through May 4.

Nanga: Idealist Painting of Japan, consists of more than 30 works from the Gallery's permanent collection. They are some of the works for which the Gallery's Asian collections are famous.

These landscapes and plant studies are not as literal, decorative or pretty as those we are accustomed to finding in Japanese art. They are idealized and highly personal revelations of the artist's mind. The flow of the ink, the calligraphic nature of the brushstrokes, the inscriptions — all these would tell a great deal to a fellow artist of the period. For us they remain subtly beautiful painting.

Asian art consultant Joan Stanley-Baker has prepared a substantial catalogue to accompany this unusual exhibition.

Watercolors by local artist Christine Richards will have a second annual exhibition and sale at Drapery World Interiors, 2517 Estevan, starting Wednesday. The showing will continue through Saturday, March 22.

On Wednesday, preview night, the hours are 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. For the rest of the period visitors can see the paintings from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Richards studied art in England and Germany before coming to Canada in 1966. She continued her studies in Alberta, the interior of B.C. and in Victoria where she ultimately settled.

Her paintings are to be found in private collections in Canada, Britain and the United States.

An exhibition of some 50 drawings, watercolors and oil paintings by Frank G. Bass, DFA (Lond.) A.T.D., will take place at the Panorama Leisure Centre, North Saanich (off East Saanich Road), Friday through March 24. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

The paintings are a selection from the work produced over the last nine years, since the artist retired from full-time teaching as art instructor in Mount View Senior Secondary School.

Ross dancers here Sunday for one show

A dancer who was also an artist with a powerful creative urge, was the founder of Vancouver's first contemporary dance company.

Paula Ross began with the desire to explore beyond the confines of traditional choreography and through her professional dance experience and original mind, she evolved in 1965, the Paula Ross Dancers. The ensemble continued its growth through the next nine years, becoming established as the Paula Ross Dance Company.

Many tours have been undertaken by this group of multi-talented performers, provincial as well as national and the company is now firmly ensconced as a national institution.

On Sunday it will present a single performance at the McPherson Playhouse, commencing at 8 p.m.

Ross has received the Chalmers Award for choreographic excellence and her company has met with enthusiastic reviews in Toronto and Ottawa as well as in its western tours. She is still the group's sole choreographer, presenting through dance, ideas that range from poetic to humorous and frequently have some comment to make on the human condition.

Puerto Rica terrorists hit Chicago, New York

United Press International

Puerto Rican terrorists armed with pistols and shotguns today staged simultaneous hit-and-run attacks on presidential campaign headquarters in Chicago and New York.

In Chicago, three men identifying themselves as members of the terrorist group FALN burst into the Carter-Mondale headquarters waving shotguns. They tied up several campaign workers and then fled as swiftly as they had come, police said.

About the same time, four men broke into George Bush's New York campaign headquarters, bound and gagged 10 campaign workers and spray-painted "Free Puerto Rico" and "FALN" on the wall before fleeing.

No injuries were reported, police said.

The attacks came on the eve of Sunday's Puerto Rican Democratic primary.

Chicago Police searched the building — which also houses the campaign headquarters of GOP contender John Anderson — seeking the suspects. A bomb and arson unit checked the building for explosive devices but found none.

Bruce Moran, comptroller for the Carter-Mondale headquarters, said he walked in and a man with a rifle behind the door told him to "get down."

"I thought it was a joke," he said.

Cuba offers asylum

BOGOTA (UPI) — The Cuban government has offered political asylum to leftist guerrillas holding 20 diplomats in the Dominican Embassy in an effort to end the 18-day old siege, a Colombian government source said.

There was no immediate indication that the government would accept the Cuban offer.

Talks between the leftists and the government to free the diplomats and 12 to 15 other captured guests collapsed Thursday when the guerrillas insisted that 311 leftists must be relesed from prison.

A second demand was payment of a $50 million ransom but this is believed to be negotiable, diplomatic sources have said.

Seeking meaning of the journey

By STEPHEN HUME

Jeni Couzyn . . . singer of spells, weaver of songs.

Better known in Great Britain, where she has made her reputation, her work burns holes through the smug veneer of academic poetry.

After four collections of poems in ten years, and readings in Canada, Britain and South Africa, more readers are taking nourishment from Couzyn's sensual and original writing.

Born in South Africa in 1942, Couzyn left in 1965, partly for political reasons. "I tried Italy and Ireland. The only place I could see a possibility of survival in was London," she said in an interview the other day in Victoria. She now divides her time between Canada, Britain and South Africa.

Couzyn was here on a promotion tour for Monkeys' Wedding, which was first published in 1972, and is now published for the first time in Canada by Douglas and McIntyre. (When it rains and the sun shines at the same time in South Africa, they call it Monkeys' Wedding.)

It was on a cross-country reading tour in 1975 that Couzyn first came to Canada. She eventually became a citizen, forming what would become an emotional attachment to the country and its powerful, native images.

While in Victoria on her first Canadian trip, she married B.C. writer David Day, and the two of them drove and camped their way eastward to Toronto. It was Couzyn's first experience with the Canadian landscape that would figure so importantly in some of her poems.

In Monkeys' Wedding there is a poem, "The Way Towards Each Other Is Through Our Bodies," which says:

The way towards each other is through our bodies./Words are the longest distance you can travel/so complex and hazardous you/lose your direction.

Says Couzyn: "When words can lead us to direct experience and communication then we're doing our job as poets. Sometimes, in the spells, the words take on a life of their own. When the words add up to more than their own meanings, that's an exciting thing for me."

In House of Changes, her most recent book, there is a section of 13 "spells" that weave a kind of magic with words, beyond words. "In the spells," she said, "I felt I was reaching through to an inner force in myself that had little to do with the intellectual decoration of everyday language.

"Each of the spells was written for a specific occasion. I published only the ones that worked." The "Spell to Banish Fear" she read to a group of six-year-olds in Toronto, and "it was one of the most moving experiences of my life. It had a power with the children chanting it. It became magic:"

By the warmth of the sun
By the baby's cry
By the lambs on the hill
I banish thee.

By the sweetness of the song
By the warm rain falling
By the hum of grass
Begone.

Couzyn celebrates the animal kingdom in Monkeys' Wedding in poems like "There Are Some Creatures Living In My Body," and in this short but powerful poem about a sea-eagle, from "Zoo Sequence":

——Why are his wings so big?
Why?
Because they are.
—But why?
Because he is heavy
He has to go up in the air.
—Why does he sit with his wings stretched out like that filling his cage?

Couzyn said she chooses to live in London because it's right for her at this time in her life. "I'm in touch with the voices of the world there, the vibrations in the air feed me and I feel spiritually and emotionally alive. But the physical environment is very tough. A lot of energy goes into physical survival in London.

"London has such a long history of human hope, expectation, discovery, experience and evolution. It's as if I'm hearing my ancestors there. .

"Canada and Africa are both very important places for me. I travel to each whenever I can. I try to spend some time each year in either Canada or Africa." Images from the Canadian and African landscapes touch Couzyn's poems indelibly.

"After I moved east my unconscious filled up with images of blizzards, ice and snow. "Canada has been very important in my development. It has opened up a whole new world for me, and has enriched my store of images."

Couzyn is at present working on a book of poems that deals with the experience of giving birth. Titled A Time To Be Born, it's about the birth of her daughter Tarot in 1978, and will also be published by Douglas and McIntyre.

"My basic work pattern is to start writing in the morning and stop for lunch, and continue until evening. Now that I have a daughter I have to get up during the night to see to her, and my patterm of work has changed radically.

"I'm able to do much less work now. I'm now working in short bursts which is very difficult. If I'm interrupted during the first draft of a poem I'll lose it. I used to work 36 hours at a stretch. Now if I get 3 or 4 hours I'll be feeling very lucky. But I wouldn't give up the joy of having my daughter for any number of books."

Couzyn said the women's movement in Great Britain is far behind Canada in terms of progress. She is working on an anthology of British women poets for use in British schools. "In most British anthologies today, there are usually one or two token women at the most," she said.

"Monkeys' Wedding could perhaps best be described as having a woman's point of view," she said. "When it came out in Britain it was negatively reviewed as shrill feminism. I felt if I had published it in Canada in 1972 it would have had a better reception. I'm glad it's available here now."

Science fiction figures significantly in some of Couzyn's poems. "I've been very much nourished by science fiction writers. They showed me a vivid landscape of ideas that expanded my mind."

The poem for two voices that concludes House of Changes, "The Meaning of the Journey," incorporates the Japanese "tanka" form, and was begun on one of her journeys from London's Heathrow airport to Victoria.

But the journey it speaks of is the human one we all take. Couzyn said: "I like the poem because the meaning of the journey is what I'm in search of."

How East Germany topped sports world

By JOHN J. JACKSON

THE MIRACLE MACHINE, by Doug Gilbert. Academic Press. $14.25.

At the Montreal Olympics in 1976, East Germany, with a population of just under 17 million, won 90 medals, of which 40 were golds. On a per capita basis this was one medal for every 188,880 people, or one gold medal for every 425,000 German Democratic Republic citizens. Comparative U.S. ratios were one medal per 2,288,489, or one gold medal for every 6,327,000 Americans. Thus, at Montreal, the GDR was just behind the USSR and ahead of the U.S. in the overall medal standings.

How, and why, did such a small country do it? These are the questions which Doug Gilbert engagingly answers in The Miracle Machine. A sad aspect is that Gilbert did not see his 1980 forecasts for East Germany materlialize at Lake Placid; this award-winning Canadian journalist was tragically killed in an automobile accident while covering the 1979 Pan-American Games.

The political goal of the GDR government since its formation in 1949 has been to establish its legitimacy throughout the world and, as Gilbert points out, sport "has been caught up in the middle of it." In times when there was no economic sympathy from the West, there was sympathy from Westerners who naively felt that sport and politics should not be mixed. So recognition of the GDR has grown as the country's athletes won nine gold medals in Mexico City, 20 in Munich, and 40 in Montreal. To further explain the "why", Gilbert notes the more general Marxist-Leninist aims of sport — all-round physical and intellectual development of all citizens which will also prepare them for work and defence.

Gilbert gives his book "life" by emphasizing particular sports figures. The technique works well, particularly in the case of Manfred Ewald, the "boss" of the Gymnastics and Sports Union. Ewald is portrayed as facets of several sports figures — Vince Lombardi, Ara Parseghian, George Allen, George Halas, and Sam Pollock. Such a man, then, heads the important non-governmental central sports body which has control of funding, decision-making, and planning. So much so that Gilbert suggests the Union seems to control the government at times.

The basic units are the mass recreation sports clubs which are found throughout the GDR. Any seven people may form a club and, when they do, each member pays a small fee (approximately 71 cents per month) to the Union. In return all resources become available: equipment, facilities, officials, and coaches. Clubs are found in factories, collective farms, craft co-operatives, administrative units, universities, residential areas, the army, and the police forces. Most funding comes from the state-owned industries and these clubs are for everyone. Elite sports people are treated separately. Basically, larger industries in various cities support the local high performance sports clubs, which offer a wide range of specialized programs.

Gilbert explains how the expertise to staff these programs has been provided. A major source has been the University for Physical Culture in Leipzig. The university has produced 7,000 graduates so far, and 300 of them have been at the doctoral level. These people have taught school children (mainly gymnastics, swimming, and exercises), adult coaches, elite performers, and have conducted scientific research of all related kinds.

The curriculum covers many areas. Most important are training in specific sports (1,032 lessons), theory and methods of training (909 lessons), and fundamentals of Marxism-Leninism (300 lessons).

Gilbert also discusses numerous medical aspects of sports such as drug-use issues and muscle stimulus techniques which the GDR sports medicine specialists are using.

He then poses the question, "Is this sport?" and in various instances throughout his book contrasts the GDR methods with those of Canada and the U.S. An important difference is the state care of athletes — in the GDR it is much more sophisticated than in North America.

The book includes fascinating political discussions but misses one important point. Gilbert says that "until the 1950's there was one great Olympic power — the United States." In fact, Germany was overall winner of the 1936 Olympic Games after the careful planning of a dictatorial totalitarian regime. Of related interest, also, is the fact that the U.S. nearly boycotted the 1936 Berlin Games; a 53-56 vote of the U.S. AAU decided the team would participate despite Hitler's well-known views on Negroes and Jews. Thus, post-war Germany inherited experienced sport administrators, the recognition of sports sciences, and the pride of German sports achievements. It remains then for the Marxist-Leninist totalitarian regime to achieve the same end that Hitler's government did in 1936. As Gilbert explains, the GDR is almost there.

'He had knack for reshaping symmetry of fact'

By WALTER KELLYTHORNE

THE CON MAN, by Ken Mitchell. Talonbooks. $7.95.

PRISONER OF DESIRE, by Britt Hagarty. Talonbooks. $7.95.

These are probably the last two novels that Talonbooks will be printing for some time. Rising production costs, poor distribution and intense competition from book-store chains who will stock only stuff that sells fast, have forced the Vancouver publishers to suspend publication, for this year at least, of any new titles.

Which is a shame. Volumes published by Talonbooks have always been beautifully designed and well printed, and have contained some of this country's most intriguing writing — as well as some of the most entertaining, like Ken Mitchell's latest novel, The Con Man.

Gilly Savard doesn't mean to cheat, or lie, or steal; but, "like all artists and storytellers, he had a peculiar knack for reshaping the symmetry of a fact to bring his listeners closer to the truth."

And that, Mitchell adds, "is a gift which readers of novels will appreciate."

So Gilly, hard-pressed to make a living, wends his way from east to west and back again, from Expo '67 to the Calgary Stampede to William Head prison, pursued both by his unavailing dreams of riches (or at least respectability) and a motley collection of cops, gangsters and plain ordinary citizens who seem all too eager to be conned.

The Con Man, though, is no scam: lightly entertaining, effortlessly readable, it's the kind of novel to read one evening with a six-pack of beer. If it cost $2.50 instead of $7.95, Ken Mitchell would be a household word — and rich, too.

Britt Hagarty won't get rich either writing novels, but it's obviously not for a lack of trying: his first published effort contains the requisite sex and violence (mostly the latter), with shovelfuls of dope and alienation thrown in.

Thrown in is the operative phrase. Clearly, there's a fascinating tale hidden here of a Victoria (yes, our Victoria!) junkie, but Hagarty seems incapable of any restraint in his depiction of what at best is a purposeless existence.

At Oakalla the narrator Sean Gallagher joins a fellow prisoner as they swallow some home-made dope:

"The . . . blue liquid afforded us the opportunity to briefly escape the tiny grey-walled musty-smelling cell whose graffiti-stained walls were mute testimony to the thousands of earlier unhappy prisoners who had suffered from boredom, self-hatred, ennui, anger and despair in its gloomy depressing confines."

It can be seen from the tone of that passage that Gallagher/Hagarty is essentially a romantic ("We were men; we were solid; we suffered separately, alone, silently"), and it becomes impossible to ignore the sheer silliness of many of his observations of himself, his companions and the woman he loves.

Obviously Hagarty has some talent. But the art demands a form, and until it's found these musings are more a curiosity than anything else. An interesting curiosity no doubt, but one that will hold the attention only of other young romantics — and book reviewers too, of course. Perhaps!

Chronicling west with brush, pen

By CHARLES ODELL

PAPER TALK: Charlie Russell's American West, edited by Brian W. Dippie. Random House. $23.50.

When you think of western artists you almost inevitably think of the two R's, Russell and Remington, and a new book of Charles M. Russell's correspondence edited by University of Victoria history professor Brian Dippie will delight those interested in the field of western art.

Russell, born near St. Louis, Missouri, in 1864, arrived in Montana in 1880 as a teenager and spent many years as a working cowboy in the U.S. and Canada before taking up art as a serious occupation.

Today his major paintings command hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A surprisingly large amount of his personal correspondence survives, invariably accompanied by beautiful art-work on letter and envelope, and editor Dippie has done a masterful job of tracking it down and supplying detailed annotations.

Russell's letters to his diverse and wide assortment of friends, including plains Indians, cowboys, frontier characters, businessmen and such Hollywood luminaries as Douglas Fairbanks, reveal a warm, generous man more than a little rueful about the passing of the old west.

He was an early conservationist, deploring the despoilation of nature by tourists, and all his life worked for better treatment of the oppressed original inhabitants, the Indians. As a young man, he had lived with the Bloods during one winter in southern Alberta.

There is considerable information concerning the first Calgary Stampede in 1912 and the Victory Stampede in 1919. Russell was an enthusiastic spectator and had major art exhibitions at both stampedes.

Of particular interest to Canadian readers are his lett[illegible] Weadick, Stampede organizer; Ralph Kendall, an ex-Mountie who wrote a series of novels about the force admired by Russell; and Bob Stuart and Tex McLeod, Stampede bronc riders.

Russell's correspondence was distinctive for its amusing plains vernacular coupled with a unique way of spelling.

For example, on a visit to England in 1914 he recorded his impressions of Buckingham Palace in a letter to Sid Willis, proprietor of The Mint saloon in Great Falls, Mont:

> I went up to the Palice the other day where King Gorg (George V) camps every thing was so quiet I think Gorg over slept that morning mayby he was up late in a stud game aney how I dident disturb him but took of my hat to the gard an let it go at that its a sinch Gorg will be sum sore when he finds I passed with out calling these gards are about as fancy a bunch of bulls as ever I saw. all six footers rigged in gold and polished steel each rider stands at his post like a statue and if it hadent been for the twich of there horses ears Id bet it was taxidurmist work.

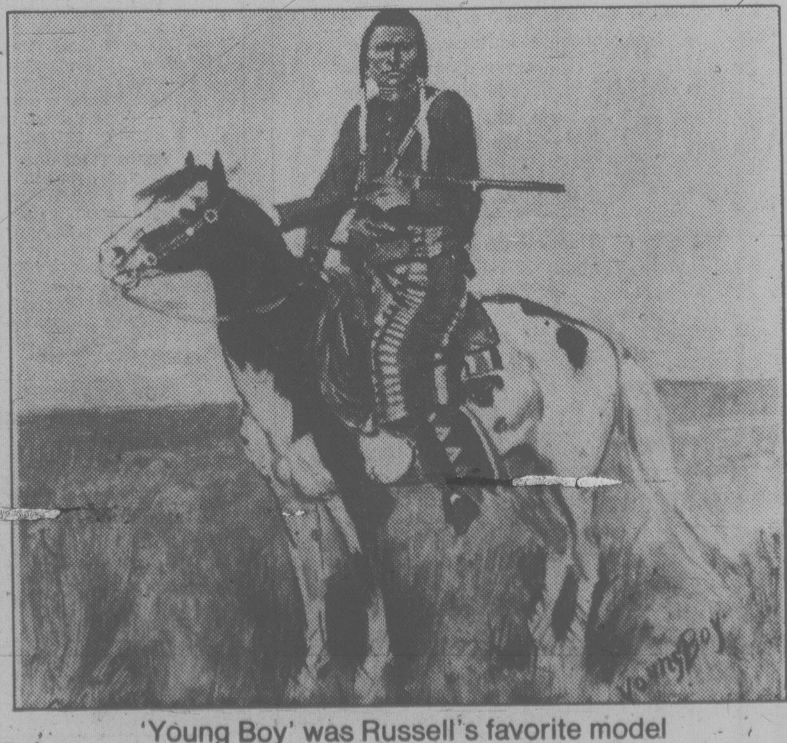
The book, which contains 20 plates of well-known Russell paintings and hundreds of watercolor and pen and ink sketches, is arranged chronologically and traces Russell's career from impoverished cowhand to renowned artist through his letters.

Although he received international acclaim for his art, Russell's friends knew him more for his strength of character, humor, wit and humanity, all of which is illuminated through his private correspondence in Paper Talk.

As his friend Will Rogers observed in a tribute to the artist, Russell would have been a great man to his friends even if he couldn't have whitewashed a fence.



'Young Boy' was Russell's favorite model

The day we ventured where Jesus walked

'The most tranquil place in world'

By Robert D. Chaplin

It is dusk on the Mount of Beatitudes. From the loggia of the modern Italian chapel, the Sea of Galilee and the hills caressing it appear as if seen through a curtain gauze.

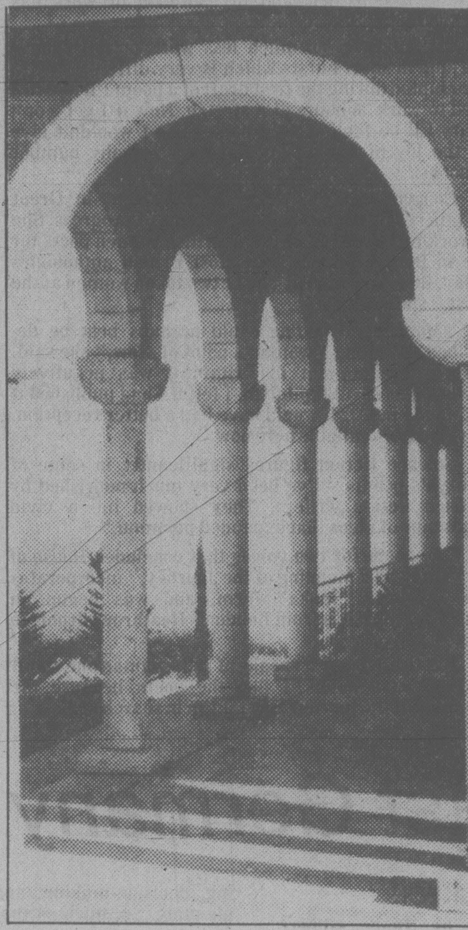
The contours of the lake and adjacent landscape are soft and gentle. The water laps against the rocks. Birds sing. Palm fronds and eucalyptus leaves stir in the breeze, sounding in our ears as a steady cascade.

Viewed through the white marble arches of the chapel, the landscape of the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee is like the New Testament itself—soft and temperate. The terrain is as comforting as the prose of the gospels. After seeing the view from this point, the inspiration that Jesus must have felt becomes almost palpable.

Many experienced travellers call this the most tranquil place in the world. Sunset is a good time to visit since the walls of the octagonal chapel built in 1937 reverberate with the singing of white-robed Benedictine monks seated around the altar. The mood is so peaceful that the seconds which pass between each chorus seem like an eternity.

At the foot of the mount, Byzantine Christians in the fourth century built a church and monastery. It was destroyed by the invading Arabs in the early part of the seventh century, but the ruins are still noticeable.

Following the lake northward from the Mount of Beatitudes is like a long, peaceful meditation. Jesus preached in Capernaum's synagogue, and visitors may tour the ruins of a third century synagogue built on the original site. While the ruins of other nearby synagogues are made of local black basalt stone, the synagogue at Capernaum is made of beautiful white marble. This says much of the prosperity of the city which existed here three centuries after Jesus' birth.



Italian chapel—site of Sermon on Mount

At Capernaum, archeologists have uncovered what is believed to be the horse of Peter, who after encountering Jesus by the Sea of Galilee, became one of his disciples. Nearby is the attractive white-walled, red-domed Greek church of Capernaum.

A few miles beyond Capernaum the Jordan River, no doubt one of the most famous rivers in the world, flows into the Sea of Galilee. It leaves the lake again at its southwest corner on its tortuous course down to the Dead Sea. Here—where it leaves the Sea of Galilee—facilities exist for pilgrims to conduct prayers or baptism.

Further down the shore in the direction of Tiberlås is Tabgha. It was here, amidst the fig trees and vines, that Jesus performed the miracle of feeding the multitudes by dividing but a few loaves and fishes. The Byzantine Church of the Multiplication celebrates the event. The church was destroyed in the seventh century but the mosaic floor which remains is one of the most resplendent in Israel. The section behind the altar recalls the miracle by depicting two fishes on both sides of a basket. The rest of the mosaic glorifies the natural landscape. Papyrus, oleanders, geese and flamingoes are represented. The unusually intricate design suggests that a famous artist of the period is responsible for the mosaic.

Between Tabgha and Tiberias along the shore of the lake is the small village of Migdal (Magdala), one of the oldest towns in the Galilee. It is the site of the biblical Migdal Numia (the Fisherman's tower), the traditional birthplace of Mary Magdalene. The village was visited by Jesus according to the Gospel of St. Mark.

Through the Mount of Beatitudes remains open till the conclusion of sunset, both Capernaum and the churches at Tabgha close at 4:30 p.m. So a recommended itinerary would be to visit Tabgha and Capernaum in the afternoon, and afterwards view sunset on the church balcony at the Mount of Beatitudes.

For the budget traveller, the youth hostel in Tabgha is an excellent place to spend the night. It is perhaps the most beautiful in the Holy Land. The building once functioned as a Benedictine hospice built by a German order in 1888. The hostel overlooks the lake and is surrounded by gardens.

The Franciscan Hospice at the Mount of Beatitudes, (Ospizio Monte di Beatitudine) offers simple but tranquil accommodations for just $10 per person per night, naturally to travellers of all religions. Visitors here may take advantage of the mount's superlative view of the Sea of Galilee.

At Kibbutz Nof Ginassar, a few miles south of Tabgha, visitors may take advantage of one of Israel's two four-star Kibbutz Guest-Houses. Double room accommodations here run about $35 (summer 1980) including a large Israeli Buffet Breakfast.

At Tiberias, one of Israel's major resorts, visitors have a large choice of hotels in this town founded 2,000 years ago on the Sea of Galilee shore; from small pensions, to hotels of all categories including the luxury Galei Kinnereth (Israel's oldest resort hotel) and the Tiberias Plaza, part of the Canadian Pacific Hotel chain.

For further information on the Sea of Galilee contact the Israel Government Tourist Office in Toronto.

Why the Hyatt Regency Vancouver and the Bayshore Inn have cut winter rates by one-third.

December through March are pleasantly mild winter months in Vancouver. They are also our "slow" months. So, to encourage your visit, we're offering a splendid inducement: one-third off our usual room rates.

With all due respect to the Bayshore, we believe the Hyatt Regency offers even more of an inducement than our friends up the road.

Because their special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel out near tranquil Stanley Park. But our special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel right in the heart of exciting downtown Vancouver. So you're steps—not taxi rides—from the city's best shopping, nightlife, restaurants, galleries, theatres and business addresses. And, because our room rates are priced a little lower than the Bayshore's year-round, one-third off ours is less expensive than one-third off theirs. Come discover Vancouver in winter. The only thing "off-season" about us is the price!

The most expensive city title goes but Tokyo still not cheap

AROUND the WORLD with STAN DELAPLANE

The foreign tourist has become a rare bird in Japan, but JNTO (the national tourist office) has been showing signs of life lately. It's surprising. For the past eight years, we've had only skim milk press releases from JNTO.

Now comes a personal letter and a chart:"... recent comparative price survey shows Tokyo ranks as only the NINTH most expensive among 17 cities..."

The survey puts the highest priced cities in order: "Paris, Sao Paulo, Frankfurt, Geneva, New York, Hong Kong, Chicago, London."

Then comes Tokyo. (Followed by San Francisco, Sydney, Los Angeles and Honolulu. Least expensive on the list is Dallas.)

Most of us have been overflying Japan. A couple of Tokyo nights broke our hearts and our pocketbooks. I haven't been further than the airport for four years.

An American friend is surviving in Tokyo with an American business behind him.

Old Far East saying:"For a happy life, a Japanese wife, a Chinese cook and an American expense account."

He has all three and he told me: "Don't even THINK of going out to dinner and a night club for less than $200 per couple. And that's economy, not first-class."

I could believe it. In the 1,000-room New Otani, the spinning rooftop bar was getting $5.50 for Scotch. Dinner was around $40 each. And a brandy was $16!

The ranking of the cities was done by JNTO offices in the 17 cities. So while I believe their honesty, well — "Never send a cat to buy lard," said my grandmother.

Ryuji Kamakawa was Deputy Director of JNTO in San Francisco.

His reasoning:"Over the past two years, the yen has weakened compared to the U.S. and Canadian dollars. Two years ago, you got only 175 yen for the dollar. Now you get 248.80. That's a boost of 35 per cent."

London's Financial Times (world bankers think a lot of it)—agrees Tokyo is ninth in rank of costs.

But it says LONDON has replaced Tokyo as the world's MOST expensive city.

The Times surveyed 66 cities: What would it cost a tourist to stay three days? "For an American in London, it would cost $550. That's for hotels, restaurants, drinks, and cab rides. A McDonald's hamburger is 75 cents and Colonel Sanders Kentucky Finger-Lickin' Chicken costs double what it does in the States."

The Times said four years ago London was in 38th place. A bargain city. In the next year, it jumped to 13th. Next year to 11th. This year it hit the top.

The Times puts Moscow rather than San Francisco in 10th place.

Why are the Japanese surfacing on the tourist scene? I stopped over in the Holiday Inn at Narita where they built the new airport. (Holiday Inns in the Orient are not like ours, a semi-motel. The Holiday Inns overseas are luxurious affairs. The one on Sloane Street in London charges $100 a day single.)

In the shoji screen bar, a Western hotel man said: "It may be the Japanese feel they lost face by not competing in the tourist market. They are so anxious to be recognized as "modern." At the same time, they really don't mean it.

"For a long time, the very best Japanese inns—the ryokans—advertised in Western tourist publications. But if you tried to get a room—"So sorry. All full."

The advertising made them "modern." Gave them big face. But they really didn't want Western people.

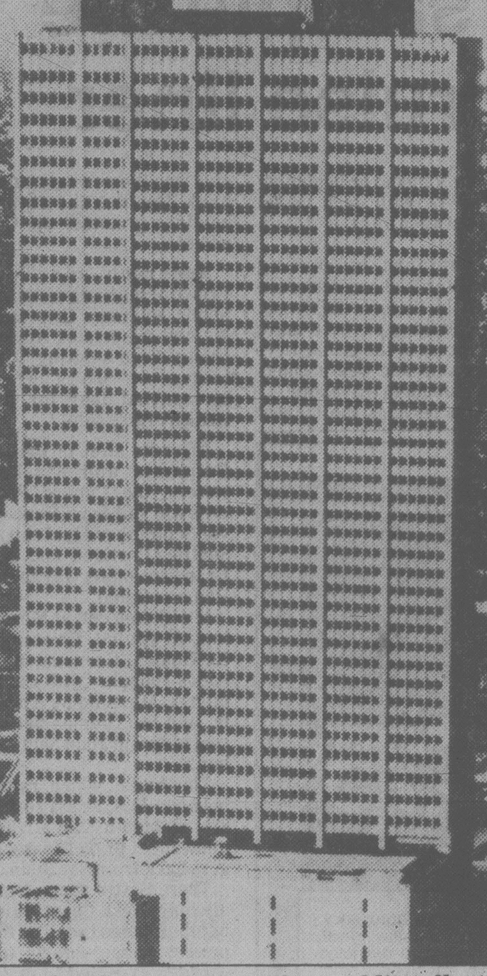
This was well known around the Tokyo Foreign Correspondents' Club. I finally got a room at the luxury Fukuda-ya after a prominent Japanese vouched for me. Promised I'd take my shoes off at the door. And sit on the floor, not on the table.

"When you sit on table, it like you sit on your father's head," my maid explained.

What's the new Tokyo cost? The JNTO survey says: "Single room with breakfast, $69.13. Shot of whisky, $2.21. Fast food burger, pie, coffee, $1.49.

You have no trouble getting rooms. The new Otani is one of several modern hotels with 1,000 rooms each.

You might have trouble getting a Japanese inn. "All full. So sorry." Foreigners make mistakes in Japanese customs. They lose face. But if you correct them, YOU lose face. It's a standoff.



Keio Plaza was once the world's tallest hotel—prices in Japan are high too

Cunard Princess—summer voyages in Alaskan waters and then cruise to Caribbean

A chance to sample life on newest cruise liner

The newest cruise ship afloat, the Cunard Princess, will make its first voyage into West Coast waters this summer.

Launched in 1977 and largely seen in Caribbean waters, the 750-passenger British vessel will sail frequently from Vancouver to Alaska and then close out the season on an exciting 24-day cruise down the United States West Coast to the Caribbean, terminating in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Westours, the Seattle based firm which specializes in Alaskan holidays, is doing the marketing for the Cunard Princess.

The Princess will join the Prinsendam and the Veendam in Alaskan cruises from Vancouver beginning May 27, with each vessel making about a dozen trips.

Westours marketing director Richard Anderson said in Victoria this week the addition of the Cunard Princess to the cruise fleet this summer was a bonus for Canadian travellers.

But perhaps the biggest plus was the coastal cruise back down to the ship's huntings grounds—the Caribbean.

Anderson and Tom Brown of the San Francisco public relations firm Dailey and Associates Advertising were visiting Victoria as part of a promotional tour for the British cruise ship.

After its stint in British Columbia and Alaskan waters, the Cunard Princess will sail from Vancouver September 4 and call at Seattle, Portland and San Francisco on its way to the Panama Canal.

It will then call at Mazatlan, Acapulco, Cristobal, La Guaira, Grenada, Barbados (popular with Canadians), Martinique, Tortola, and St. Thomas before reaching San Juan September 27.

The fares, which range between U.S. $2,235 to $3,870, include a $300 airfare allowance to get passengers back from San Juan.

There is still space from all four West Coast cities but the chance to sail on the newest cruise ship in the world is expected to make demand brisk.

Victoria is apparently a fruitful market for Westours along with Vancouver, Calgary and Edmonton.

Anderson said the Caribbean cruise is the best deal going this summer at between 10 and 15 per cent below comparable packages at about $135 a day.

Local travel agents should have the details.

How the Brits rate our travel agents

British Rail is on the right track with the wad of Britainshrinker brochures it is distributing throughout Canada. They come with suggested tour itineraries and latest prices.

But even more enlightening is their assessment of the top travel agencies in British Columbia in 1979.

Take a bow B.C.A.A. offices in Vancouver and New Westminster, which finished one and two on the poll, followed by Thos. Cook and Eatons of the Vancouver variety.

Totem Travel (Hillside) fared the best of the capital city agents at fifth spot followed by B.C.A.A.'s Victoria office at seven and Totem Travel (Mayfair) at eight.

ANOTHER "THANK YOU Canada" gesture by the United States is the major theme for the 19th annual Canadian-American festival at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.

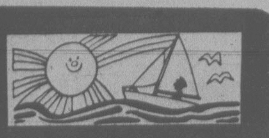
The festival began Saturday and runs until March 23 and this year is bigger than ever, say the organizers. There'll be golf tournaments, a parade, free holiday draws, a darts contest, a disco skating competition, frisbee throwing and a 10,000 metre Can-Am run.

If you're not quite up to the run, then try the laughing competition. Organizers expect 60,000 Canadians to be lured to Myrtle Beach for the fun and games, along with a like number of Americans. Should be quite a giggle.

TRAVEL BROCHURES OOZING color and young people have poured in over past weeks enticing young carefree campers to tackle almost any spot in the world.

There's a clear choice between roughing it on an overland safari or going to campgrounds with flush toilets and showers, sprinkled with a night or two under "hard top" as one brochure calls hotel accommodation.

Travel Update



Goway's Young Adult Adventures, Sundowners 1980 Europe Campotel tours (for 18 to 38s), Goway's Canada and the Americas, and British Airways' Europe Adventureworld 80 all arrived within days.

It's not so bad out here on the West Coast, but it's not hard to imagine those on the Prairies young enough will be away in a flash once they see the fun and sun promised in the brochures. If you're tempted, see your travel agent.

SCANDINAVIA ON THE CHEAP? It can be done says the public relations department of Scandinavian Airlines SAS.

With today's inflation rate and sinking dollar values what would you say about renting a fully furnished apartment in Scandinavia for $45 a night—at the height of the tourist season?

That's the tease with the latest publicity blurb from SAS. It also offers a hotel night in Sweden for $20, including breakfast, service charges and sales tax.

As well, 400 Swedish restaurants have apparently agreed to feature a special tourist menu where lunch or dinner, including coffee, taxes and tips costs $6.35.

There is more of the same in A Guide to Low Cost Scandinavia which is just off the presses from SAS.

YOU'VE NO DOUBT HEARD the stories about driving your car to Tijuana. In a word DON'T.

However, the Mexican National Tourist Council has come up with an antidote. It reports that for a paltry $1, the City of Tijuana offers North Americans special auto insurance cover of $5,000 for vehicle damage, plus third party injury and liability.

More than that. Motorists can get their dollar back by shopping or dining in any of the participating Tijuana merchants.

With more than 35 million people expected to cross the U.S.—Tijuana border this year, that's some bravado.

THINGS ARE BUSTLING out Buena Park way in California.

Just 10 minutes from Disneyland, Buena Park is home to three of California's greatest attractions—Knott's Berry Farm, Movieland Wax Museum and the California Alligator Farm.

In the California style (the Texas of the west) things are the biggest in the world, the smallest, longest, or whatever and the alligator farm has the most reptiles you'll find anywhere. The wax museum has two new sets—Superman and Sherlock Holmes and Knott's are celebrating their diamond jubilee.

The folks down that way say the coming summer is going to be a boomer so make your plans now if California beckons come mid-year and those holidays.

Family of gastronomic all-stars

PARIS (AP) — France's famed Michelin Guide for the first time has awarded its top three-star rating to a father and a two-star rating to his son for separate restaurants.

One Michelin inspector deplored a dramatic drop in the number of good, moderately-priced restaurants in the country.

"It's the first time in our 80 years that we have awarded stars to the same family in different restaurants in the same year," said one of Michelin's traditionally anonymous inspectors.

The history-making father and son are Joseph Rostang, 50, and Michel Rostang, 31.

The father's La Bonne Auberge in Antibes on the Riviera won the coveted three-star rating, designating "the best cuisine in France, worthy of a special journey." Michel's Paris restaurant, called simply Rostang, earned two-star status for cuisine "worthy of a detour."

"In fact, we must be the first six-star family in France, because my wife's parents have a star at their Pic Pierre restaurant in Grenoble ," said Michel.

The family may win more stars in future guides. Michel's younger brother is training at Archestrate, another Paris three-star house.

"My sons are the fifth generation of chefs in the family," Rostang senior said proudly.

The promotion of La Bonne Auberge brought to 20 the number of three-star restaurants in France. The implacable inspectors left all the previous top ratings intact and raised eight restaurants to the two-star level.

The Michelin inspector lamented one aspect of this year's guide. It lists only 252 restaurants in all of France noted for a high standard of food at moderate prices—a maximum 50 francs ($12) for a meal.

"Three or four years ago we had at least 400," he said. "It's a sign of the times, of changing society, that it's getting harder to find anything between high gastronomy and mass food."

SOME LIKE IT HOT IN MANILA

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Snuggled on the slopes of a legendary mountain outside metropolitan Manila is a newly opened mountain spa with nine pools.

The $2.6 million Crystal Springs, some 45 minutes drive away from Manila, is one of the outstanding hot springs resort for which Laguna province is known.

The Crystal Springs pools are different from each other, though all were carved out to look like natural lakes with boulders and plants strewn in the waters.

Bathers have a choice to dip in hot, cool, warm, bubbling, or waterfall-like pools.

Winging it with jet set over wine country

By PHILIP SOUSA

POKOLBIN, Australia — Long one of this country's major attractions, the serene wine-growing Hunter Valley area now is but a few air minutes away from lively Sydney.

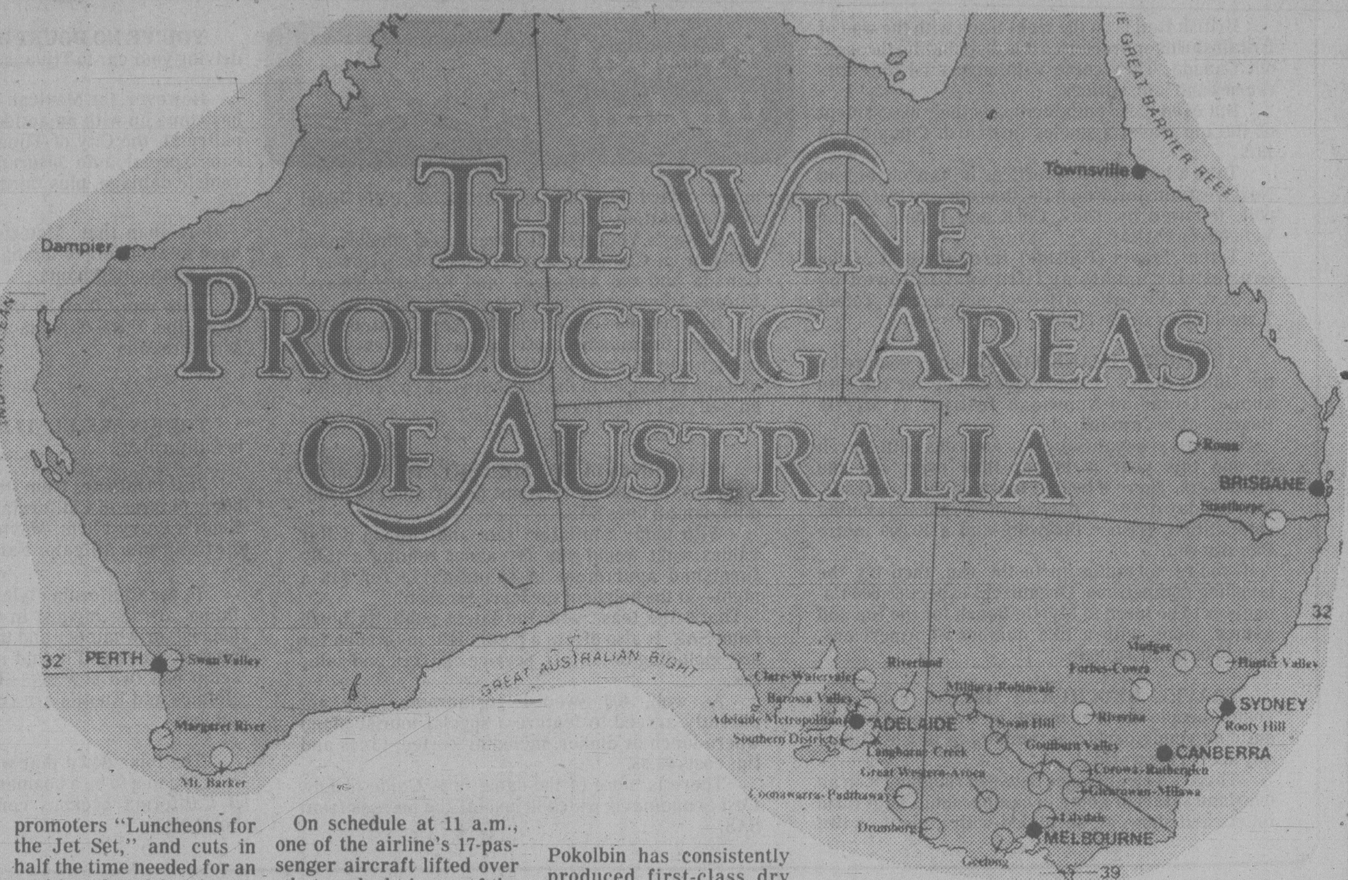
A number of regions spread throughout this continent produce what an increasing number of experts are describing as from good-to-excellent wines:

- The Barossa Valley, about 30 miles north of Adelaide and settled many decades back by Germans, is perhaps the one foreign visitors are most familiar with. Grenache, shiraz and riesling are the principal grapes grown.

- THE SWAN Valley area near Perth in Western Australia also attracts serious enologists as well as those merely curious, table and dessert wines being the most numerous and popular there.

And there are other wine-growing quarters.

But none is more accessible from the country's premier gateway, Sydney, than is the Hunter Valley, a geographic happenstance that is a bonus for the time-short visitor.



DAYLONG BUS tours have been available for some time, and still are. At about $20, including lunch and wine-tasting at the Hungerford Hill Wine Village here, these packages are certainly worthwhile. However, about six hours of the excursion are taken up by the 240-mile round trip on the bus.

A new concept, one which substantially minimizes road travel, has just been introduced by the Hungerford wine makers in co-operation with F.A.S.T. Airways, a commuter carrier.

IN ESSENCE, this novel idea has been dubbed by its promoters "Luncheons for the Jet Set," and cuts in half the time needed for an exciting, though brief, peek at a very appealing area and the opportunity to sample some superlative wines.

Just off a long but superb flight with Qantas, Australia's international airline, I tried one of these midweek tours of the Hunter by air and found the "jet set" description as apt as the price was right.

THE JOURNEY started with a taxi hop from my hotel, the conveniently located Hyatt Kingsgate. It being mid-morning during the week, I made it to the F.A.S.T. facilities at Sydney airport in less than 15 minutes.

On schedule at 11 a.m., one of the airline's 17-passenger aircraft lifted over what no doubt is one of the world's most attractive cities and cruised north over the sandy coastline for most of the way here.

AT CESSNOK Airport, a minibus waited to take us to the Hungerford Hill Wine Village, five minutes away past several local wineries.

Not quite an hour from our departure from Sydney we joined other visitors who had arrived by car, bus and train and proceeded to taste some of the wines in the village's triple cellar complex.

One of the country's pioneer grape-growing regions, the lower Hunter River Valley anchored by Pokolbin has consistently produced first-class dry white wines, with top reds and sauterne types making sporadic appearances.

RIESLING, SHIRAZ (both black and white), semillon and pinot are the principal varieties cultivated by such long-established growers as Dalwood, Ben Ean, Glen Elgin and Oakvale. In recent years, though, about a score of new vineyards have been established, among them Hungerford Hill.

The Hungerford operation started in 1967 when the company purchased a tract of land at Pokolbin. Planting—shiraz, cabernet sauvignon and semillon—took place a year later.

AND THE FIRST vintage, about 11 tons of mostly shiraz, was released when the cellar complex and the village's restaurant were opened in 1973.

Our group, which included both experts as well as dedicated wine devotees such as this writer, had the opportunity to taste about half the 16 reds and whites currently being marketed by this house. Cognoscenti and amateurs alike appeared duly impressed. Two personal choices: A 1975 Hermitage, a delicate yet full-oak-flavored red, and a 1978 Pokolbin Collection Semillon, a clean, dry white with a soft finish. Both retail around $4.

A BIT OF TIME, regrettably too short, followed for a stroll through this unique "village" that includes a "Children Only" playground built from materials commonly used in wineries—cubby houses made out of large barrels, climbing posts, and so on, an attractive art gallery and craft centre, a delightful "Farmers Market" packed with homemade jams, sausages, cheeses and meat pies of every sort along with fresh local vegetables and fruits, a handy "Kiosk" dispensing snacks, soft drinks, cakes, sandwiches and other picnic staples, and a riding centre where hour-long escorted trail rides through the nearby vineyards are available.

OUR "LUNCHEONS for the Jet Set" precluded picnic and trail rides—but what we, and anyone on these tours, got instead more than made up for having to skip two activities popular with those here for a longer spell.

The casual but memorable event was lunch at Hungerford's famous Cellar Restaurant, a very French domain presided over by young Robert Molines and his wife, Sally.

Though he prefers to stay in the background, the chef made a brief appearance before our gathering of rather jaded food, wine and travel writers—and got a sustained round of loud applause. A feast that changes each day has made the Cellar one of Australia's finest restaurants.

AS PROMISED, the repast was leisurely. The announcement that the minibus was ready to take us back to Cessnok Airport caught most of us with a glass of good Hungerford wine in hand. We reluctantly left the village and boarded the return flight at 3:30 p.m.

Less than an hour later I was back at the Hyatt Kingsgate with plenty of time for a rest before taking in some of Sydney's lively nightlife.

Our peek at the Hunter Valley was much too brief, but it served well as an introduction to this attractive corner of the state of New South Wales and some of its fine wines.

AT LESS THAN $60 per person including the flights, wine tasting and that glorious lunch, it was one heck of a bargain.

Former U.S. Rep. killed

NEW YORK (AP) — Former congressman Allard Lowenstein, civil-rights activist and leader of the movement to dump Lyndon Johnson as president in 1968, was shot to death by a former mental patient who was once a political ally, police say.

Police said Lowenstein, 51, was shot five times Friday afternoon by Dennis Sweeney of New London, Conn. They said Sweeney strode into Lowenstein's Rockefeller Centre law office at 4 p.m., shook hands with the lawyer and then without warning pumped five slugs into him, hitting his heart, lungs, stomach, and left arm.

Lowenstein was taken to St. Clare's Hospital where a team of nine surgeons operated for five hours. He died shortly after 11 p.m.

After the shooting, police said Sweeney sat in the office reception area, placed a pistol in a secretary's "in" box, lit a cigarette and waited to be arrested.

Police said Sweeney, 37, a divorced carpenter, was charged with second-degree murder and possession of a deadly weapon.

Sweeney said Lowenstein had represented a man who sued his stepfather, Gerald Sweeney, and that the suit caused family problems that led to his stepfather's fatal heart attack Feb. 24, police said.

Lowenstein served a term as U.S. ambassador for special political affairs at the United Nations after being appointed by President Carter in 1978. In a statement issued Friday night, Carter said Lowenstein's murder "cut short a life devoted to reason and justice."

Art backs loans for Kennedy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Senator Edward Kennedy's financially strapped campaign for the presidency is putting up costly works of art as collateral for bank loans.

A Kennedy spokesman said the campaign has so far obtained a $100,000 loan secured with a portrait of the senator painted by pop artist Andy Warhol.

The chief spokesman for the Kennedy campaign, Patrick Lucey, said the organization is also negotiating for loans on the basis of paintings donated by modern artists Robert Rauschenberg and Jamie Wyeth, son of the realist painter Andrew Wyeth.

Kennedy's faltering drive to win the Democratic party's presidential nomination from President Carter has been in severe financial trouble since January when the president scored the first of many victories in primary elections in various states.

With donations drying up, the campaign has tried to conserve funds by cancelling its chartered campaign plane, firing half the staff, reducing salaries and skipping some paydays altogether.

Meanwhile, Senator Bob Dole abandoned his quest for the Republican nomination today for U.S. president, while Gerald Ford tried to determine whether he could succeed where Dole failed and stop Ronald Reagan.

"It was a long shot from the start, but worth the effort."

$351M loss for Leyland

LONDON (Reuter) — The struggling British Leyland Motor Co. has reported a $351-million loss for 1979.

Chairman Sir Michael Edwardes, who is pushing ahead with a company recovery program, said Friday he expects Leyland will also lose money in 1980.

Leyland made a small profit ($4.9 million) in 1978.

United Church guests

India helpers here

Keith and Jo Jamieson

The Victoria presbytery of the United Church of Canada is sponsoring a series of talks by Keith and Johanna Jamieson, husband-wife missionaries of the church who are on furlough from India.

Keith Jamieson has spent one term as missionary in Angola and several in India. He has degrees in engineering and science and a diploma in environmental control from the London School of Tropical Medicine. His wife has degrees in accounting and commerce. They are both involved in aiding agricultural development in their India mission.

In the mission, based in Pune, both have been involved as joint counsellors in church youth fellowship and have held Bible classes in their home.

Their itinerary includes:

March 18—7:30 p.m., an evening of Hearing and Seeing at Royal Oak Centre, 4353 West Saanich Rd.

March 19—2 p.m., Fairfield United Church lower hall; 7:30 p.m., Mill Bay UnitedChurch (to include Shawnigan, Duncan and Lake Cowichan areas).

March 20—10 a.m., First United Church Fellowship Hall, Quadra at Balmoral.

March 21—11 a.m.-1:30 p.m., University of Victoria.

March 22—9:30 a.m.-3 p.m., Making a Living Workshop, St. Georges Church, Cadbora Bay and Maynard streets (World Development Education); 7:30 p.m., Gordon United, Gorge Road.

March 23—11 a.m., Centennial United, Gorge Road.

All are welcome to any of these events.

Perspectives

By Rev. John A. Davidson

On Dec. 18, 1979, the Vatican's Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith declared that Father Hans Kung, a Swiss who teaches at Germany's University of Tubingen, is no longer to be recognized as an official theological representative of the Roman Catholic Church.

Having read Kung on the papacy and infallibility and other sensitive issues, I can understand, with some sadness, why that action was taken.

It would be presumptuous for me to proffer my Protestant advice to Catholics on the Kung matter, but I do hope there will some resolution of it that will not prove excessively damaging either to the Catholic Church or to the new ecumenism that owes so much to the Second Vatican Council.

I have read several of Kung's books. I consider two of them, The Church (1967) and On Being a Christian (1974) to be among the most important theological works in recent years. I did, again and again, raise an eyebrow or two as I read them, but I found them, on the whole, significantly deepening my understanding of the Gospel and the church and giving me more ideas for sermons than I will ever be able to use.

As a pastor I have been greatly heartened by what Kung says about the local church, the congregation, the parish. His theology here, as in so many other places, cuts across denominational lines and can bring new insight and encouragement to today's harassed pastors and their bewildered people.

"The local church," he writes, "does not merely belong to the Church; the local church is the Church . . . and can fully represent the cause of Jesus Christ. It is only in the light of the local church and its concrete realization that the universal Church can be understood."

In another place he says that the local church "is in no way to be seen as a subdivision of the real Church. The local Church is the real Church."

He deals very helpfully with the notion of congregation: " 'Congregation' means both the actual process of congregating the congregated community itself: the formal should not be overlooked." He goes on to say that the Church "is not something that is founded once and for all and remains unchanged," and that it becomes what it is "by the fact of a repeated concrete event, people coming together and congregating for the purpose of worshipping God."

He declares that "the concrete congregation is the actual manifestation, the representation, indeed the realization of the New Testament community."

And he points out that the Church "is never merely a static institution, but one that exists through the repeated event of a concrete coming together."

Reading Kung did not change my thinking on the local church, but it did sharpen my thinking and did give me encouragement as a minister in a local church.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

World vision leader pleads for refugees

NEWELL
. . . like it is

The executive director of World Vision of Canada, William J. Newell, will be in Victoria on Friday as part of his S.O.S. campaign to raise funds for the Cambodian people.

Newell has been to Cambodia recently and will tell what it is really like in the strife-torn country. He'll outline ways to help when he speaks at Emmanuel Baptist Church on Friday at 8 p.m. The public is invited.

In his talk, Newell will tell of the attempt being made to keep Cambodians alive and to restore the land so that refugees on the Thailand border may return to their own land. He will answer questions from the audience.

There are 50,000 orphans under the age of 12 in those camps. World Vision will be looking after 10 orphanages and will be reopening the 75-bed pediatric hospital it had to abandon in 1975.

Guatemala topic

Marta Gloria Torres, this year's featured speaker for the Ten Days Lenten programs in B.C., will address a workshop in Victoria on Making a Living.

Torres is a labor lawyer, exiled from her native Guatemala along with her husband as a direct consequence of police persecution, and constant threats on their lives.

Recently events, including the attack on the Spanish embassy there, have brought into focus the reality of the terror and brutality directed by a military dictatorship against anything perceived as opposition or dissent.

Other speakers include Bishop Remi de Roo who will report on his Central American tour and Jim Manly, newly-elected MP for Cowichan-Malahat.

The sessions are at St. George's Anglican Church (Cadboro Bay Road and Maynard) Friday, at 7:30 p.m., and Saturday March 22, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Sponsoring organization is the Victoria Inter-Church Project for World Development Education.

Radio missionary Baptist speaker

Strauss
. . . at Central Baptist

Central Baptist Church, 833 Pandora Avenue, is hosting the Spring Bible Conference this Sunday through Thursday of next week. Guest missioner will be Dr. Lehman Strauss, the radio pastor of the Biola Hour, heard each day over KGDN radio in Edmonds, Wash.

The demand for clear and practical exposition of the scriptures has resulted in requests for his ministry from more than 1,100 churches and conferences across the U.S. He has spoken to groups in Korea, Japan, Hong Kong, Europe, South America, Viet Nam, Haiti, the Bahamas and Hawaii.

In January of 1972 a weekly radio ministry was added, called Bible Study Time. This ministry has expanded to 200 stations in 40 states.

Eighteen volumes of Strauss's writings have been published. They include commentaries on Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, James, The Epistles of John, Daniel, Revelation and related Bible themes.

Strauss can be heard on Sunday at 8:45 a.m. and 11 a.m., as well as at 7 p.m. He will teach as well, each day at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. (Monday through Thursday). The public is invited to all of the meetings.

Relief leader visiting

Anglicans have been hearing about the work of the Primate's World Relief and Development Fund this week from the fund's development education secretary, Rev. Carl Major.

Meetings have been held in Port Hardy, Port Alberni, and Nanaimo. Thirty people from Victoria parishes are taking part in a workshop today at Saint Peter's, Lakehill. They are hearing about projects supported by the fund and are sharing in discussion of its concerns.

"The church has given special emphasis to the primate's fund at this mid-Lent season for the past decade: It's good to have first-hand information about its work through our visitor this year," says Canon Barry Jenks, program director for the Anglican Diocese of B.C.

Major joined the primate's fund three years ago after serving for 18 years as a parish priest in Labrador, Newfoundland, and Trinidad. He will speak Sunday at 9:30 a.m. at Saint George's, Cadboro Bay, 11 a.m. at Saint Mary's, Oak Bay; and at 7:30 p.m. at Saint Barnabas'.

Gorge nurse at forum

This week's noon Lenten Forum at St. John's Anglican Church on Quadra will feature Mrs. Pat Fullerton, director of Nursing at Gorge Road Hospital, examining the problem of maintaining the wholeness of the person who is institutionalized. "Can we create an alternative to the home that still leaves the person intact?" she asks.

The series is open to all. Sessions begin at 12:10 each Wednesday in Lent and conclude at 12:50.

The forum is designed to encourage people to bring their lunch, have a cup of coffee and participate in a stimulating discussion.

Miscarriage rate 75%

ASHFORD, Wash. (AP) — A 75-per-cent miscarriage rate has the 400 residents of this logging town at the foot of Mt. Rainier frightened and confused.

Since early October, nine out of 12 pregnancies in the Ashford area ended in miscarriages.

One of those women aborted twice, in October and January. Another, five months along, aborted Tuesday.

The cause of the miscarriages is unknown.

The women think it might be linked to the controversial herbicide 2,4-D because more than 700 acres of forest surrounding Ashford were sprayed from the sky with chemicals including 2,4-D last spring and summer.

Dr. Samuel Milham of the state department of social and health services said in an interview the culprit may be in the community's water supply, which he plans to begin investigating next week.

Periodically, two shallow creeks that feed Ashford's water holdings become contaminated, causing diarrhea and vomiting.

But Milham admits there is little likelihood of finding a water contaminant that causes miscarriages. "I'm unaware of any usual thing that could do it," he says.

A group representing all forestland owners in the Ashford area, the Washington State Pest Management Alliance Inc., said Friday there has been no aerial spraying of herbicides within eight kilometres of Ashford during the past year.

Newsman seized

AMATILLO, Honduras (UPI) — Three burly gunmen seized the UPI correspondent in El Salvador from a downtown street in the capital and forced him into a van that drove him across the border with Honduras, where he was released unharmed.

El Salvador officials said Demetrio Olaciregui was expelled because his immigration papers were not in order and invited him to return.

Body identified

BELFAST (Reuter) — The remains of a body found in a rubbish dump outside Belfast has been confirmed Friday as that of West German industrialist Thomas Niedermayer, 45, kidnapped from his home seven years ago.

Sunshine is worth it's weight in Gold in Broadmead and this executive home under construction gets more than its fair share. Broadmead home. "Sure and it's a lovely home and I would trade me pot of Gold for it," says Sean my leprechaun (all Irishmen have leprechauns). It's too big for him, but it may be just right for you. Last-minute juggling

One of the more rational comments about the Princess Marguerite controversy was made to me this week by a professional engineer: "Every car in the junkyard, every ship that's ever been scrapped — at some point someone has made the decision that it's not worth fixing up any more," he said. "Someday someone would have to make that decision about the Marguerite. No ship can sail forever."

The gentleman went on to say, however, that when the time comes for that decision to be made, the owner of the ship or the car involved should engage in some rational planning so that the decision is made at the best possible time and when an appropriate substitute is waiting to take the junked vehicle's place.

It is on the second part of the argument that the B.C. government must come in for severe criticism. Sentiment aside, the government probably did have good grounds to say that the Maggie was reaching the end of her useful life. She had reached an age where, according to steamships experts, her efficiency was markedly declining, and, with rapidly rising oil prices, she was becoming extremely costly to operate. The need to install sewage holding tanks to meet U.S. environmental standards would have made it especially expensive to refit her for 1980 and 1981.

It must be emphasized that this is the argument that she perhaps is not worth fixing up any more. This is not an argument that she is unsafe. No one in the government has yet provided a whit of evidence to back up this suggestion, although cabinet members were forced into trying to argue it vehemently when it was repeatedly pointed out to them that without some appropriate planning for a substitute, inefficiency was not a good enough reason for scrapping the Maggie.

If the decision that age and inefficiency had caught up with the Maggie was to be made, however, it behooved the government and/or the B.C. Steamships Corp. to come up with an appropriate substitute for the service — a service that was at least as good as the one the Maggie provided, and preferably better.

It is the same as any ordinary individual who, when he decides his car isn't worth fixing up any more, arranges a trade-in for a better car — not for one that can't carry the whole family and won't do the job as well as the one he's getting rid of. The average driver normally keeps his old clunker until he has found a better car that suits his purposes.

Yet that is just what the government didn't do. It made the decision to scrap the Maggie, but it didn't have any suitable replacement lined up. Even after the final decision was made that the Maggie wouldn't sail again, government officials were running about Europe trying to find a substitute. They didn't. And the government ended up with the Queen of Prince Rupert — a ferry that should have stayed on the northern run, that couldn't carry one-half as many people as the Marguerite, that may or may not be able to make the two runs a day that would be needed to keep her capacity anywhere near the Maggie's, and that would herself need extensive refitting to be suitable for the Victoria-Seattle run.

Now the government, at the last possible moment, is scrambling like mad to get itself out of this hole. It has reached the most preliminary agreement with a soon-to-be-set-up, non-profit society of Victoria businessmen to supplement the Rupert with a jetfoil. The society would lease and operate the jetfoil, making three round-trips per day on the run. At the same time, the society would be given the Maggie to turn into a maritime museum or other suitable tourist attraction.

The proposal obviously does meet the worst flaws in the plan of running the Rupert all alone on the run. Yet the businessmen — hardly any of whom are directly connected with either the ship or transportation industries — are put in a serious bind with regards to the amount of time available for them to plan this service so it can operate properly. Within eight or 10 weeks they will have to establish a society, lease a jet-foil, find a crew, arrange a schedule, set up docking, customs and ticket-selling facilities, and establish financing arrangements to cover any losses that may occur. If they had had a year to plan in, it would have been easy.

Now, with luck, they may be able to do it, so that the tourist season will run smoothly this summer. But if so, it will be no thanks to the government planners who left everything until the very last minute.

And if things go wrong, it is the government who should be blamed, not the group that is trying to do in weeks something that should have taken months.

Ellen Goodman

It's a matter of heart

BOSTON — The two books arrived on my desk within days of each other. Two books that got down to the heart of the matter, to the essential muscle of life. Each was about coronary disease and each was about love — the double role and meaning of this vital organ.

In the first, Heartsounds, Martha Weinman Lear chronicles in honest detail and language life with her 53-year-old doctor husband, from his first heart attack through his slow, unwilling descent into death.

It is painfully vivid, pulsating with his strength and illness, fibrillating with his powerlessness and their mutual pain.

The second, Thursday's Child, by Victoria Poole, is plainer and more upbeat from the cover to the conclusion. This mother writes about her 17-year-old son whose heart disease led to a transplant.

The two end differently. Today Dr. Harold Lear is dead. Sam Poole is now a sophomore at Stanford, living with 50 medications and their endless side-effects, saying, "When you consider the alternative, that's not much."

But what struck me most was not the different endings but the similar feelings. At some moment, each family desperately wanted their doctors to "Do Something!" As Martha Lear wrote, "I cannot make peace with it. I believed that I could but I cannot. Simply to stand by and let his heart, this part that should be a replaceable part, keep slowing down, fizzling out: and then he is gone."

I was sensitive to this, I'm sure, because a few weeks ago the Massachusetts General Hospital decided Not to Do Something, not to do precisely what had saved Sam Poole, precisely what Martha Lear grasped at: heart transplants.

The MGH — satirized as "Man's Greatest Hospital," characterized often as the most prestigious hospital in the world — made a difficult and influential decision not to do heart transplants, because ". . . in an age where technology so pervades the medical community, there is a clear responsibility to evaluate new procedures in terms of the greatest good for the greatest number."

The decision was surprising for many reasons. In medicine, doctors are taught to respond to the pain of the patient in front of them. To Do Something for one Harold Lear, one Sam Poole. At medical research centres, the elite often prefer that "Something" to be "interesting" and innovative, and transplants are both. Often doctors have adopted new procedures first and worried about the consequences later.

Furthermore, the transplant operation is not as risky as it was in 1967 when Christiaan Barnard kept his first patient alive for 18 days. Today at Stanford University, where the heart team has the most experienced and extensive program, 65 per cent of the carefully screened transplants live a year, half are alive after five years.

So, when the MGH talks about the greatest good for the greatest number and turns away from transplants, it is a neon sign of change. It is a blinking announcement of the arrival of the Medical Age of Limits.

The dialogue about "resources" — about allocating time and money and people — is a dialogue about short supply. We have stopped believing that we can do everything — in science, in family life, in government, in industry — and have begun talking about choosing. This is one of medicine's tough choices.

Heart transplants are as limited as heart donors. We can only "harvest" an estimated 1,000 hearts a year for an estimated 15,000 to 75,000 potential patients. Should we then spend $100,000 for one year of life for a successful transplant? How do we comparative-shop the price of that life versus others that might be saved?

Should we use our resources to give a Sam Poole a new heart, or perhaps to improve the procedures and care given to a Dr. Harold Lear? Should we concentrate on giving a Dr. Lear more quality care at the outset, or in providing him with the transplant he finally requested at the end? Is it moral not to do everything we are able to do?

The questions that responsible [illegible] people are dealing with have no right or wrong answers. Increasingly, they have to make judgment calls, close calls. And the answers will course through the lifelines of very real people like the Lears and the Pooles.

Stockholm residents sun themselves on benches in city centre plaza

Cities of fear

There should be 'something for everybody'

By WOLF VON ECKARDT

The Washington Post

America's most pervasive urban designer is Fear.

Fear-fully, designed cities, however, are fearful. There is no place to sit on streets or plazas, for fear that bums or hippies might become comfortable. There are no benches in the parks, for fear that drunks might sleep on them. There are no vendors, for fear they might compete with established stores. There are no street performers, for fear they might become an attractive nuisance. There are no hot dog or fruit stands, for fear of litter.

Years ago, when Bassin's applied for Washington's first sidewalk cafe licence, the Daughters of the American Revolution said they feared that outdoor eating and drinking would encourage prostitution.

Chicago's grand old Buckingham Fountain is surrounded by an electrified fence for fear kids might splash in the water.

In Baltimore, federal judges tried to stop the erection of a sculpture in front of their new courthouse for fear assassins might hide behind it. Don't laugh. That's what the federal judges said.

In recent years, to be sure, a growing number of Americans have come to like ledges you can sit on, park benches, street vendors and artists, sidewalk cafes, fountains and public sculpture. We argue that public spaces, art and amenities attract people downtown and that the more "eyes on the street," as Jane Jacobs put it, the safer the streets become.

Or is that wishful thinking?

Enough well-meant efforts at exterior decoration and designed ambience turned out to be such dismal failures as to plant doubts in the minds of the most ardent Jane Jacobists.

But now we can take heart. We have evidence. It's on film (which is every bit as evident as FBI videotape). "Fear proves itself," says William (Holly) Whyte.

In a superb little book, The Social Life of Small Urban Spaces, Whyte has summarized a decade of meticulous and ingenious research of how people use streets and plazas, what works and what doesn't.

Whyte is one of a small band of generalists who, 22 years ago, began to arrest and reverse the horrendous damage specialists were doing to our damaged cities. Whyte was an editor of Fortune magazine at the time, who, with Jane Jacobs and Grady Clay, was part of a small band who published The Exploding Metropolis.

This book first opened our eyes to the fact that the central city was being "renewed" by architects, planners, politicians, bankers, big businessmen who did not like cities. It pointed out that the surge to suburbia was no romantic Sturm and Drang but, for the most part, a reluctant emigration forced by the absence of decent middle-income housing, affordable mortgage loans and good schools, and nurseries in the city centre. It showed that roughly half the suburbanites would have preferred to commute by public transportation, had there been any, and that high-rise public housing in the ghettos was a disaster.

The most important message in this book was that downtowns must be lively to live, and that live they must because their death would be far too expensive.

"The point . . . is to work with the city. Bedraggled and abused as they are, our downtowns do work. They need help, not wholesale razing . . . The remarkable intricacy and liveliness of downtown can never be created by the abstract logic of a few men. Downtown has had the capability of providing something for everybody only because it has been created by everybody," wrote Jane Jacobs in her contribution to Whyte's book. At the time hardly anyone listened. The idea is just now beginning to sink in.

In his study of small urban spaces, Whyte has now returned to this theme, not with a sermon but a prescription.

He does not tell us what ought to be. He doesn't present pretty but untested designs or the computerized hypothesizing and statistical juggiery that usually passes for urban research. He does what real, as opposed to social or behavioral, scientists do: He observes. Often he records observations with absolute accuracy and a stamina far beyond human endurance by employing time-lapse or slow-motion cameras running for as long as 48 hours.

This method often yields surprising discoveries and will surely soon become an indispensable tool of city planning.

The merchants along Cleveland's Euclid Avenue, for instance, insisted that curb parking in front of their stores was essential to their economic survival. Time-lapse cameras, mounted above the avenue, produced a film which showed cars flitting to the curb and ejecting their drivers who would then, in the jerky fashion of old flicks, rush for blocks up and down the avenue and disappear in side streets. Not one entered a store.

As to planning places with fear and distrust, Whyte's observations show that planners get what they are looking for. The fear is mostly of "undersirables."

"They are not themselves much of a problem," he says. "It is the measures taken to combat them that is the problem. Many businessmen have an almost obsessive fear that if a place is attractive to people it might attract undesirable people. So it is made unattractive. There is to be no loitering, no eating, no sitting. So it is that benches are made too short to sleep on, that spikes are put in ledges; most important, many needed spaces are not provided at all, or the plans for them are scuttled.

"Who are the undesirables? For most businessmen, curiously, they are not muggers, dope dealers, or truly dangerous people. They are the winos, derelicts who drink out of half-pint bottles in paper bags — the most harmless of the city's marginal people.

"For retailers, the list of the undesirables is considerably more inclusive: the bag women, people who act strangely in public, 'hippies,' teen-agers, older people, street musicians, vendors of all kinds . . .

"The best way to handle the problems of undesirables is to make a place attractive to everyone else. The record is overwhelmingly positive on this score. With few exceptions, plazas and smaller parks in most central business districts are probably as safe a place as you can find during the times that people use them."

Won't outdoor chairs be stolen?

The New York Metropolitan Museum of Art provides some 200 chairs alongside its front steps, which people can move in or out of the sun, to join others or to enjoy privacy. The chairs are out 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The Met figured that it is cheaper to trust people and buy replacements periodically than to have guards gather the chairs every night. And that's the way it has worked out. There is little vandalism.

There are startling findings and lessons on virtually every page of Whyte's manual. The most startled readers will be the architects of some of these small urban spaces. Real people usually behave differently than the pin-headed little figures on their drawings.

I am writing regarding your front page item of the Times, Feb. 26, titled "United Way blasts welfare". I have done a survey on welfare recipients in Victoria, and agree with the United Way report that these recipients are living below poverty level, but not just "most" recipients, all of them. The figures are definitely not misleading as Grace McCarthy states.

In my survey, I used Victoria rents, not Vancouver, as a basis for shelter costs, and I included special benefits such as Family Allowance, Renter's Credit, and Child Tax Credit. Even with all of these benefits together, welfare recipients are still below poverty level.

Here is such an example: A single mom and 2 kids (boys 12 and 16)

Welfare rates (max.) for rent and all utilities — $325 per month
Welfare rates (max.) for food and all other necessities — $270 per month
Family Allowance (Dec. 1979) —$40 per month
Total money per month —$635 per month
Welfare and Family Allowance total per year — $7620
Child Tax Credit per year — $ 436.00
Renter's Credit per year — $ 150.00
Total Income per year — $8206.00
1979 poverty level for year for 3 people — $9792.00

This family would be living below poverty level by: $1586.00 per year

Of course, no one would divide the Renter's Credit and Child Tax Credit by 12 months and use it as part of their monthly income. This would be totally unreasonable. Because there is no more Special Needs Allowance available from Welfare, these credits would be used for special needs such as clothing, furniture, repairing appliances, etc. This then takes the family back to an income of $595 per month from Welfare, and $40 a month from Family Allowance, or $7620 per year, which is stll below poverty level by $2172 per year.

This welfare family is allowed $325/mo. max. for rent and utilities, plus $270 support for all other necessities. In the Victoria area, a three bedroom apartment would cost at least $350/month. This would leave this family $245.00 plus $40 Family Allowance, totalling $285 per month to buy groceries and all other needs such as drug store needs, transportation, laundry, plus clothing.

Here is what the consumer department states as a low cost food plan for this family for August, 1979:

Woman	—$ 73.92
Boy 12	— 87.89
Boy 6	— 78.13
Total food cost per month	—$239.94
Money left after food costs	$45.06

These food costs would use all extra money, but since the welfare would "apprehend" these kids if they weren't wearing shoes, boots, coats, etc., less money is spent on food, since that is the only place where the money could be taken from. Then the "welfare bums" are blamed for not feeding their kids properly.

If our kids are deprived of a decent level of living now, how can we expect them to mature and be able to want to even try to help themselves in the future? Without a guaranteed annual income at least equal to poverty levels, our kids' future looks pretty bleak. I hope that I'm not around when my kids are old enough to realize that we lived in poverty because our welfare system didn't care about their future — or maybe we should just "blame the kids for being born." This sounds as good as Ms. McCarthy's statements made in your paper. — F. Shannon, 615 Chatham.

Self-sufficient

I would like to commend Paul Minvielle for his excellent articles on farming on the Saanich Peninsula which appeared in the Times January 29, 30 and 31. The points he makes about how hard it is for our farmers to survive are well taken.

I would like to follow up on the point of Vancouver Island being self-sufficient in fruits and vegetables. This will only be possible when three things happen.

First, the general public must be educated to the fact that this is a desirable goal in the long run, but it may cost the consumer a little more in the short term.

Secondly, all available farmland must be preserved and used, and existing farmers and new farmers encouraged to keep their farms in production. And third, the multi-national supermarket chains must refrain from bringing in cheap produce from California which undercuts our local produce. I would like to point out that these "cheap" imports are not really cheap but are surplus produce that California wants to get rid of quickly to keep their price and profits up and so are sold to us for cost or less. Therefore it seems as if it is produced cheaper than ours but it really is not.

When these three things can be achieved, I feel we will have a healthy farming industry on the Saanich Peninsula and healthy local produce in our stores. Let's all start now to make it happen. — Nancy Stuart, Member of the People Food Commission, 3409 Veteran St.

Good theatre

I would like to say how much I have enjoyed the productions presented by the Belfry Theatre. This organization has been responsible for bringing excellent theatre to Victoria and I find it hard to believe that they spend the large amounts quoted by the Inter-municipal Cultural Funding Committee on administration. Simply visiting the theatre, knowing nothing of the management side, it would seem apparent that they are operating on a "shoe-string."

We are fortunate to have a wide range of entertainment in Victoria now and long may it flourish. Let us hope that Mr. Purdy's committee will listen to members of these local arts organizations and produce satisfactory financial solutions. — Janet Simpson, 290 Surrey Road.

Revenge can be so sweet

CALGARY — Victoria eliminated defending champion St. Mary's Huskies from the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union men's basketball tournament and no one enjoyed it more than Viking coach Ken Shields.

The Vikings did it up right. Dominating virtually all aspects of the game, Victoria hammered St. Mary's 91-75 Friday night to advance to today's final against Brandon Bobcats, another power from the West.

Brandon beat Winnipeg Wesmen 85-81 in the other semi-final to set the stage for the first all-Western championship game in CIAU history.

Forward Reni Dolcetti played a solid inside game, scoring 32 points for the No. 2-ranked Vikings. Billy Turney-Loos added 24 and Ted Anderson 15.

The victory avenged Victoria's defeat at the hands of the Huskies at last year's final.

The Huskies, who trailed 47-39 at the half, got 18 points from Ron Blommers, 15 from Rick Plato and 14 from Ross Quackenbush.

"It's very sweet revenge," said Shields, who had seen St. Mary's knock his teams out in the last four years. "They beat me twice when I was at Laurentian and then twice at Victoria."

Huskies also defeated Victoria in a meeting in the Calgary Classic two seasons ago.

Sheilds said Dolcetti "played a super game" and he was "very pleased with our defence."

"It was exactly the type of game I thought it would be."

The six-foot-eight Dolcetti, completing his collegiate career, hit on 14 of his 20 field goal attempts and also hauled down 12 rebounds.

Gerald Kazanowski scored nine points and pulled in eight rebounds.

Vikings hit on 51 per cent from the field and 69 per cent from the free-throw line while St. Mary's, constantly harried by Victoria's hard-working defence, managed only 43 per cent success on their field goal shots.

Vikings dominated the boards, picking off 43 compared to Huskies' 28 rebounds.

In the Brandon-Winnipeg game, the Bobcats jumped to a 45-32 half-time lead but Winnipeg fought back to trail by four points going into the final minutes. Brandon guard Fred Lee then began scoring from outside to spoil the Wesmen's comeback attempt. Lee finished with 30 points.

Devon Daley led Winnipeg with 24 points. Bob Magel and Scott Greer added 14 and 13 points, respectively.

"It was lucky for us that we built up such a good lead," said Brandon coach Jerry Hemmings. "It looked like some of the kids missed their wakeup call in the second half."

In the consolation semi-finals, York Yeomen downed Calgary Dinosaurs 88-76 and Concordia Stingers defeated Windsor Lancers 96-90.

York and Calgary entered the second half tied at 46 but the Dinosaurs faded in the stretch as York pulled ahead by 10 points in the final two minutes. David Coulthard sparked the Yeomen with 23 points and Bo Polech added 16. Fred Koepke with 20 and Karl Tilleman with 16 replied for Calgary.

The Stingers, ahead 45-41 at the half, received 26 points from Leon Bynoe and 20 from Doug Whaley. Vince Landry led Windsor with 18 points, followed by Phil Hermanutz who had 16.

St. Mary's and Winnipeg met today to decide third place while York and Concordia played in the consolation final.

Islanders, Condors gain final

VANCOUVER — Duchess Park Condors of Prince George and defending-champion Nanaimo Islanders, putting Greater Vancouver area contenders into the deep freeze, tangle tonight to determine British Columbia's best high school boys' basketball team after semi-final victories in the 35th annual provincial tournament.

Duchess Park, ranked first prior to the tournament, qualified for the final with a come-from-behind 61-59 victory over Richmond Colts on Friday. The second-ranked Islanders avenged a defeat by Steveston earlier this season by downing the Packers 67-55.

Nanaimo has lost both of its encounters this season with the Condors.

Steveston and Richmond, the Vacouver area's top-ranked teams, will play for third place today.

Richmond's Alan Tait scored 31 points to put Duchess Park in the unaccustomed position of having to come from behind and the Condors did not pull even until six minutes remained.

Guard Karl Bush scored nine of his 17 points in the final stretch to put the Duchess Park ahead.

Nanaimo led Steveston by 19 points in the first half but was hard-pressed to hold off the Packers. Six-foot, six-inch centre Dan Steffes led the Islanders with 26 points.

North Surrey and Gladstone will decide fourth place today after easy victories Friday.

Penticton and McNair, first-round losers Wednesday, will play in the consolation final for fifth place.

Chris Frelich scored eight first-quarter points to spark McNair to an early lead over Cowichan Secondary and hand the Duncan school a 71-41 loss. The Marlins led 30-19 at half time. Frelich and Brad Willock each scored 20 points, while guard Ray Bryant added 18. Gary Stockford scored 13 points for Cowichan.

In other games, Penticton Lakers clipped Courtenay Towhees 63-55, North Surrey defeated Handsworth 72-60, and Gladstone stopped Centennial 55-41.

Canadiens, Canucks and two born losers?

One week's work and it wasn't that long ago that everybody was worrying about the sad state of the Montreal Canadiens. They had completed a terrible road trip (for them), had lost six in a row and were something less than ordinary. The coaching problems were far from settled. Claude Ruel wasn't certain he wanted to stick around and take the flak that Boom Boom Geoffrion had been absorbing. The Montreal fans were mumbling in their distress. And it was a question how far down the ladder the Canadiens would tumble before they hit bottom.

That was a few months ago. Has anyone noticed lately that the Canadiens are on the way back? They beat Minnesota Wednesday night for their seventh straight victory and their 10th game without defeat. And they have been doing much of it while hurting bad, or much worse than they were when they were losing earlier.

They played without their three top defenceman Monday and three that many feel are the best in the game — Larry Robinson, Serge Savard and Guy Lapointe.

Before that, Guy Lafleur was out of action and without Lafleur the Canadiens are just another hockey club. Right? Wrong. Other players, given the chance, have quickly picked up the slack and now the Canadiens are moving in on the over-all leaders. Not that they have much hope of catching all-conquering Philadelphia, but they could pass Boston while the surprising Buffalo Sabres aren't completely out of sight

So all is well? Basically, with a minor problem. If it wasn't bad enough that Lafleur may have been slowed up by his injury, the Canadians have learned that Savard is out for the season. What was thought to be a bad bruise has turned out to be a broken ankle. Robinson is also on the shelf because of injuries while Lapointe is in a spot of bother with his coach. Lapointe, for whatever reason, failed to show up at practice one day this week and Ruel responded by leaving him out of the lineup with the terse comment: "I'm the boss here and I put the 19 players I want into the lineup. It's my privilege"

But that could be just a normal upset. Ruel basically has done a good job and if there is one club other NHL teams don't want to meet in the early NHL playoff rounds, it is the Canadiens. Barton Bradley, the Boston scout, was overheard on VI 90 the other night expressing just that fear. In the finals fine, but not before then, because the Canadiens still are the team to beat in Bradley's, and Boston's, opinion.

And would you believe it — the Vancouver Canucks who are given up for dead every week, especially a week ago when they were buried 9-3 by Atlanta Flames — are in line for a playoff spot? Just when someone throws another shovelful of dirt on them, they snap back. They now are 16th (and last) but have a longshot chance of jumping all the way to 12th!

It doesn't appear to make sense — the Canucks having had as much trouble as they have had — but it's true.

The shocker is that Los Angeles, in 12th place, has hit the skids. The Kings have won only six of their last 28 games and after such a fine begining too, and are only six points ahead of the Canucks, the Canucks having three games in hand.

Hartford is the other surprise. Proving the best of the WHA clubs, the Whalers, in 13th, are crowding the Kings and have four games in hand.

Pittsburgh, in 14th, has a five-point bulge on the Canucks but is struggling, as is 15th-ranked Detroit.

Of course, Quebec, Washington and Edmonton are also interested in the playoff stakses and are not too far away either. Matter of fact, before Friday's games there was only nine points between 12th-ranked Los Angeles and 19th Edmonton.

It boils down to a battle royal.

Otherwise, I see where harness driver Joe Hudon racked up win No. 1,000 last week at Cloverdale Raceway while up the road at Ex Park more than 800 thoroughbreds are in training for the B.C. Jockey Club season's opener, April 14. The Ex Park season will run 114 days and with a Victorian, Wayne Isbister, cast in the role of defending leading trainer with 55 wins. Isbister has 22 head on the grounds . . . and, for racing buffs, track works may be found in the mainland dailies.

But the story I like is about two losers who went to Reno and Santa Anita for a bit of an investment vacation. They wagered going and coming, on everything that Reno and Santa Anita could offer, bet on tossing objects into a waste paper basket on long evenings in a motel, picked NHL winners, which proved easier than the picking the ponies; and even wagered on which one's luggage would be the first down the ramp at the airport.

Born losers? They sure were. Both of them.

Their luggage went on to Phoenix!

Olympic 'obligation'

LONDON (AP) — The British Olympic Association told Members of Parliament Saturday it has an obligation to support the Olympic Games in Moscow.

It also declared that alternative games, as suggested by U.S. President Carter, are impossible.

MAKING SAVE against Dennis Hull of Old Stars is goalie Ted Spouse, who was named outstanding player for Victoria Kinks in entertaining exhibition hockey game Friday night at Memorial Arena.

Old Stars still have fun

A gang of aging hockey players showed about 3,500 fans at Memorial Arena a thing or two Friday night.

The Labatt's NHL Old Stars, led by Eddie (The Entertainer) Shack, took on the Victoria Kinks from the Racquet Club and demonstrated:

—That the pressure of big league hockey hasn't dulled their enjoyment of the game;

—That age may have slowed them a half-step but they can still make all the moves;

—That Shack still skates with his head down.

It was by all standards a first-class offering of hockey entertainment — for the Old Stars as much as the crowd. You had only to look at the faces of the players to see that. It was grins from one end of the ice to the other.

The score? Nobody knows. The most reliable count had it 10-3 for the Old Stars but that included one that goalie Marv Edwards purposely scored on himself. In any case, they wiped out the numbers on the scoreboard and started at 0-0 for the third period.

You got the impression the Old Stars — among them Bob Nevin, Mike Pellyck, Sid Smith, Norm Ullman, Andy Bathgate, Harry Howell, Pierre Pilote, Dennis Hull and Jim Pappin — could have scored a bushel. So why didn't they?

One good reason was Kinks' goalie Ted Spouse, who earned one of the Labatt player-of-the-awards. The other went to Bathgate for his stick-handling wizardry.

A second reason was simply that the Old Stars were having too much fun clowning. Shack played the lead here.

Thirdly, they didn't bother to register several Old Star goals on the scoreboard. It would have been superfluous anyway.

Shack won the acting award for, among others, his impersonation of a goaltender in the second period. Edwards loved it. He got a goal.

Edwards got another one when he and Spouse traded teams midway through the game, the usual sporting gesture in such affairs. This one produced a twist, though, when Edwards made a save, collared the puck, shot it into the Victoria goal and skated back to his own net.

Best skill display of the night was by Ullman. While his mates took time out for refreshments, he succeeded in keeping the puck away from the Kinks until somebody tackled him. Otherwise, the chase might still be going on.

Quick whistle gives Canadiens comeback victory against Jets

Times News Services

An apparent goal by the Jets was disallowed Friday in the dying seconds of a National Hockey League game against Montreal Canadiens in Winnipeg.

The Winnipeg net was empty and six Jets were swarming the Montreal net when Ron Wilson lifted his own rebound over Denis Herron.

However, referee Ron Fournier ruled that Herron was hurt and he had to quickly whistle the play dead, and the Canadiens hung on for a 4-3 victory before 15,602 fans.

Rejean Houle, appearing in his first game since Jan. 30, when he suffered a broken jaw against Colorado, scored the winning goal at 2;02 of the third period.

Houle's 16th goal of the season capped a Montreal comeback that wiped out the Jet's 3-1 lead.

Guy Lafleur passed an NHL milestone with two goals, numbers 400 and 401 of his career and ended a six-game scorless streak during which he suffered a knee injury.

Bob Gainey had the other Montreal goal.

Scorers for the Jets were Kris Manery, Lyle Moffat and Wilson, all in the first period as Winnipeg took a 3-1 lead. The Canadiens drew even in the second period with two goals.

Montreal coach Claude Ruel was relieved to see his team win. It was the Canadien's 11th straight game without a loss.

Winnipeg coach Tom McVie insisted that his team had scored a legal goal to tie the score.

"A shot was stopped, the puck went down and it went into the net," he said. "If there was a whistle there shouldn't have been one."

Herron said he had been hit on the forehead with a stick when he fell to the ice.

Lafleur, the youngest player in NHL history to reach the 400-goal plateau, started the Montreal comeback by whirling around to slap a bouncing pass from Gilles Lupien. Gainey added a power-play goal to tie the score, 3-3.

In Edmonton, rookie Mark Messier fired two goals in the third period to spark the Edmonton Oilers to a well-deserved 6-4 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks, as the Oilers kept their faint playoff hopes alive.

The win left Edmonton tied for 17th spot in the NHL overall standings, even with Washington and one point behind the idle Vancouver Canucks, who hold down the 16th and final playoff position.

Cats face Bighorns

Bob Smith may come back but Victoria coach Jack Shupe will keep 16-year-old Stu Kulak in the lineup when the Cougars face Billings Bighorns in their Western Hockey League meeting at Memorial Arena tonight.

Smith, who sat out Thursday's 3-2 loss to Seattle Breakers because of a charley horse injury, appears to have recovered. A skate this morning was to determine if he's ready to play tonight.

If he returns, Shupe will sit out another Cougar forward to keep Kulak in the lineup. The youngster, an affiliate who played for Sherwood Park in the Alberta Junior League, turned in a solid performance in his WHL debut Thursday but will return home after the weekend because of education commitments.

Another player recalled from Sherwood Park, 17-year-old defenceman Jerry Heikkila may get his first taste of WHL action Sunday when the Cougars visit New Westminster. Heikkila will remain with the Cougars for the balance of the season.

The Bighorns, hoping to overhaul Medicine Hat for third place in the Eastern Division standings, moved to within two points of the Tigers by defeating New Westminster 6-2 in one of three games played Friday. In other games, Brandon tied Saskatoon 4-4 and Lethbridge drew 3-3 with Calgary.

the house

by jake banky

This year I do not intend to buy a new car or build a stadium or dig a coal mine in my back yard.

Neither do I plan to start charging the neighborhood dogs a stumpage fee for the use of my trees. I already have a fireplace. With luck, I won't have to go on welfare.

So what does the new provincial budget mean to me, an average sort of salaried slob, afflicted with kids, mortgage payments and a serious affection for beer?

I have calculated that on an annual basis I will recoup $4 on my oil bill, another $4 on my telephone bill and a magnificent $20 on my Hydro bill. That works out to a windfall profit of $28 a year.

A $5.8 billion budget and I get a lousy 28 bucks!

The miserable soul who will get the most out of this budget is one who plans to buy a mobile home, install a wood stove and sit around taking patent medicine for his toothache while considering swapping his Cadillac for a Honda so he can invest the money he saves in a small business venture capital corporation.

Good luck to him.

I'm going to take my $28 and buy enough beer to make me forget the whole thing.

Of all the sharpened sticks being poked at Hugh Curtis' first budget, probably the most annoying for the Socreds was the one wielded by their own colleague, Jack Davis.

In his calm, reasoned, unemotional fashion the aging Rhodes scholar took Curtis to task for reversing the trend set by his predecessor, Evan Wolfe, in the previous four fiscal years.

Listen as the government's resident Untouchable addresses the house:

"For some years now, government spending in this province has been lagging behind the growth of our Gross Provincial Product. Now with this latest budget it is gaining. It is up sharply. If the spending estimates are realized it will approach the high level reached in 1975-76 by the NDP."

Davis had more to say. What about the billion dollars received in unexpected revenue? Why has Curtis given back only $54 million by way of tax cuts?

"Instead of the $54 million allocated by the minister of finance I would give several hundred million dollars a year back to our provincial taxpayers," quoth Davis.

No jolly desk-thumping from government members for that poke in the eye.

Davis didn't stop there. "What about such important projects as a new gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, proper refinancing of B.C. Rail and the purchase of new equipment for our emerging Urban Transit Authority?"

Cabinet ministers rolled their eyes at the ceiling.

Just before concluding his remarks, Davis made use of a rather pregnant turn of phrase.

"I am on this side of the house," he said, "because I believe this party stands for less government rather than more government."

Was that a hint he might be considering a different side of the house?

Heck no, said Smilin' Jack. He intends to work closely with all his colleagues to make sure the government stays on the right track.

Then the lonely figure wandered off down the empty corridor while the bombast and buffoonery jumped back to its normal level in the debate.

Who says this is a heartless government? It has just made a boy's dream come true.

Every lad loves a big, old boat to play with in the tub. And what fun to see the shiny jetfoils whizzing back and forth between Seattle and Victoria.

The boy's name is Sam Bawlf.

Everyone a tourist today

Thousands of Victorians became tourists in their own town today.

All 8,500 tickets were sold for the event by 5 p.m. Friday and throughout the day, moms, dads and their small fry lined up for buses to take in a wide range of attractions.

The participants — the Royal London Wax Museum, Classic Car Museum, Anne Hathaway's Cottage, Sealand and Miniature World — donated their premises for the weekend.

The tour promotion ends Sunday.

After paying expenses for advertising and printing tickets, the Visitors Information Centre estimates it will net more than $20,000 of the $25,500 in receipts for tourist promotion work.

Despite the heavy demand for tickets, no more than 8,500 could be sold because of the long line-ups that would result.

In advance of the mass visit by local citizens, Doris Exton's Grade 4-5 students at Sir James Douglas elementary school toured the attractions as a school field trip.

The youngsters then wrote letters to their guide, Lorraine Cooper, who is marketing officer for the Visitors Information Centre.

They described the visit in vivid language.

Elizabeth MacMillan liked the canopy bed at Anne Hathaway's Cottage.

To wit: "The canopy has a very useful purpose. It was used to keep bugs and mice from falling from the thatched roof into the bed with them."

Some children found Sealand as exciting as a Jaws movie.

David Moulton wrote: "The killer whale's teeth are not for chewing the food, they are for ripping chunks off its prey. After they rip the chunk of meat they just swallow it like it is, bones and all."

He was also impressed by Miniature World, with its model of the CPR and the sparkling diamond mine from Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

Anne Greene noted that a gallon jug at Anne Hathaway's Cottage was used for alcoholic beverages and after someone had gone beyond a certain mark he was considered drunk.

This apparently was the origin of the expression "mind your Ps and Qs," meaning pints and quarts.

Aaron Pollard noted that the jug was made of leather and pitch, giving it is name pitcher.

The trip had been educational, he said, because at Sealand he had seen real octopus eggs and had learned to tell the difference between seals and seal lions.

It's AOK for jetfoil

By AL FORREST

An agreement in principle has been reached with Boeing to lease a jetfoil for six months starting May 1, Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele announced today.

"We still have to negotiate a few small points but it looks like it will cost us $3.62 million to lease the Flying Princess for six months," Steele said.

"After that, we will have the option to buy it for $8.5 million, if we wish."

Steele said the complete package should be ready to present to Premier Bill Bennett at a meeting Wedesday.

"We could have final approval by Friday. The B.C. Development Corporation is in Seattle today, talking over the numbers with Boeing."

Steele emphasized that the jetfoil is not being operated by the chamber.

A separate non-profit organization, called Operation Jetfoil, is being formed.

This citizens group will either hire a manager, contract out the management to an experienced company, or invite the B.C. Steamship Corp. — a provincial government agency — to manage the route.

B.C. Steamship operates the Queen of Prince Rupert, which has replaced the Princess Marguerite.

In addition, Steele said, the new Victoria-Seattle run could be just the start for Operation Jetfoil.

"It is not unusual for non-profit organizations to involve themselves in vital services. We could consider obtaining more jetfoils and run them run between Victoria and Vancouver or over to Nanaimo.

"But first we want to see how profitable the Seattle venture is."

He estimates revenues of $5.67 million, at most, for the six months, assuming the craft operates at 70 per cent passenger capacity.

It carries 750 people and fare would be $20 or $25 each way.

Revenue projections can't be precise because there might be special rates for return tickets and for group excursions.

STEELE

But there would be an estimated profit of about $2 million, which would be divided between the B.C. Development Corporation, which would provide some seed money, and Operation Jetfoil, which would get the larger share.

All profits would be ploughed back into the operation.

Steele called an emergency meeting of his board of directors Friday to reassure them the chamber would not in any way be financially liable if Operation Jetfoil runs into the red.

"Things happened so fast I didn't have time to clarify that this was not a chamber project. I guess many people just assumed it was because I was making a lot of statements.

"And other people involved included Mel Cooper, Pip Holmes, John Ansell, Alan Emery and Terry Farmer — all past presidents of the chamber. But Operation Jetfoil is a separate entity."

Among the things to be decided is whether to form a provincial non-profit group, a federal non-profit corporation or a federal company offering shares that would be held by a provincial non-profit body.

"We are getting legal advice now and that will be part of the package for Wednesday's meeting," Steele said.

Operation Jetfoil expects to sign a complex deal with Boeing, with the Seattle company assuming all the costs for wages, fuel, spare parts and servicing.

The payment of about $600,000 per month would include all those things as well as the lease amount.

Boeing representative Robin Little was in Victoria Friday for discussions with Steele's group.

Earlier, Little had said Boeing was not interested in leasing out the Flying Princess, she was for sale only. A price of just under $10 million had been mentioned.

But at meetings Friday Little agreed in principle to a six-month lease with option to purchase at $8.5 million after the lease expires.

The Flying Princess is two years old and has been used as a demonstrator model by Boeing.

She would run three-times-a-day between Victoria and Seattle.

Operation Jetfoil will also bid $1 to buy the Princess Marguerite and turn the historic vessel into a Victoria museum. Profits from the jetfoil could be used for conversion work.

Steele said the steering committee established to form Operation Jetfoil is looking for additional recruits.

"Those who set this up are all extremely busy people. We are looking for new blood to help out."

Steele said he hopes to find the time soon to begin a number of additional projects that would be beneficial to Victoria.

Meanwhile, criticism of the decision to use the Rupert on the Seattle run continues. Capt. Arne Davis, western secretary of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, said the planned two-trips-a-day schedule for the small vessel would not attract many visitors.

He charged that the provincial government is deliberately turning the thriving route into a money-loser so it could abandon it completely in 1981.

Jodi's what Telethon's all about

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Jodi Rice is 10 years old, likes hockey and baseball and figures he might like to coach a team when he grows up.

He'll probably be pretty good at it too — he's won trophies for being the best fan in a baseball league.

Why does he daydream about coaching instead of playing?

Jodi has cerebral palsy and he's in a wheelchair most of the time, so he wants to do what he thinks he'd do best in whatever sport he ends up in.

But don't feel sorry for him.

He doesn't need pity.

The B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children couldn't have picked a better kid to be their 1980 Timmy for the Camp Shawnigan Telethon.

Bright as a new penny, Jodi is handling his new fame with the familiarity of an old pro.

Is he excited about being on television when the show airs on Channel 10 March 22-23?

"Oh, yes," he says.

He talks excitedly about having to leave the McPherson Playhouse on the opening night of the Telethon to race over to Memorial Arena.

There Jodi will handle the opening faceoff in the Victoria Cougars-New Westminster Bruins game.

Jodi has met lots of people, including politicians and other celebrities, but few things beat meeting a Cougar.

So how or why was he selected to be Timmy?

"They told me a couple of days before the meeting I'd probably be Timmy," Jodi said.

"I wasn't there, so I don't know how they picked me."

Jodi has a big job ahead of him.

He'll be representing Vancouver Island's 3,300 disabled children in the Telethon to raise funds for Camp Shawnigan, the 20-acre Easter Seal camp on Shawnigan Lake.

There are classrooms, dormitories, a gymnasium, a cafeteria, two playfields and tennis courts.

Since the Lions Society bought the former private boys' school in 1978, the facility has been completely refurbished and renovated to accommodate wheelchairs.

About 300 mentally and physically disabled children and adults enjoy a six or eight-day holiday at the camp for less than one-quarter of the actual cost.

But there are still a lot of improvements needed.

More ramps and wheelchair bathrooms are needed, the dormitory needs fireguarding, the electrical system needs upgrading.

The cost will be considerably more than $100,000.

The Lions hope to someday build a specially equipped indoor pool as well, but they'll have to raise $400,000 first.

The Lions operate 32 Easter Seal buses on the Island, carrying roughly 600 persons every day to special schools, clinics, recreational activities and workshops.

Jodi knows how busy the buses are.

He leaves his school in the George Pearkes Clinic around 3 p.m. and doesn't get to his house at 482 Thetis Crescent in Colwood's Belmont Park until 4:20 or 4:30.

Does it bother him?

Not a bit.

He's too busy living life and he's just happy the bus is there so that he can get to where he's going.

The upcoming Telethon is your chance to show Timmy and his friends how much you admire their zest for living.

The Camp Shawnigan Telethon starts at 8 p.m., March 22, and various groups around the Island are already gearing up to make contributions.

The pledge number is 381-1980, and you can make your pledge a week in advance if you're not going to be around for the telethon.

If you do wait for the weekend, you can pick up the Telethon entertainment on Victoria, Saanich and Urban cablevision channels right up until 5 p.m. March 23.

C of C to run industry body

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce has been awarded a one-year contract to operate the regional industrial development commission.

The chamber will receive $65,000 to run it for 12 months, starting from the day the agreement is signed.

The industrial development commission began in 1977 when chamber director Jeremy McCall urged president Alan Emery to form an organization to do something to increase the number of industrial jobs available in Victoria.

The plan gained widespread community support.

The four core municipalities agreed to fund the office, with the assistance of grants from the provincial ministry of economic development.

But in 1979 the provincial grants expired and industrial development officer Barry Mayhew resigned.

The function was turned over to the capital region district.

Some municipalities expressed concern about plans to hire additional employees at the regional level and urged the capital region district to contract the work out.

The chamber was given a tryout early this year and Friday was awarded a steady contract.

Good turnout seen

Municipal officials in Central Saanich expect a better-than-average turnout for today's election of mayor and two aldermen.

Municipal clerk Fred Durrand predicted between 1,700 to 2,000 of the municipality's 4,691 voters will make the trip to the polls.

Last November just under 1,700 voted.

The polls are open until 8 p.m. and are located at Brentwood elementary, 7085 Wallace Drive, Keating elementary, 6843 Central Saanich and the municipal hall at 1903 Mount Newton Cross Road.

The byelection was called after former Mayor Jean Butler announced early this year she was stepping down for health reasons.

Two aldermen, Dave Hill and Frank Waring are running for mayor and six others are vying for their positions on council.

Dear Abby:
In your reply to Angry in San Mateo, you wrote that "love generates love."

The late Martin Luther King Jr. showed us that hate generates love, too. In his Stride Toward Freedom, he wrote:

"I can only close the gap in broken community by meeting hate with love. If I meet hate with hate, I become depersonalized, because creation is so designed that my personality can only be fulfilled in the context of community . . . When I love, I restore community . . ."

Arthur H. Prince

Dear Abby:
Recently you ran a letter from a woman who had signed a "Living Will," and was relieved to know that should she ever fall victim to an incurable illness, she would be allowed to die in dignity. I think you should warn your readers the merely signing a Living Will is no guarantee that one's wishes will be carried out. It will also take perseverance on the part of the family.

Last May, my husband died of lung cancer after a very short illness. He had a history of heart disease, and the previous year had suffered a severe stroke that left him partially paralyzed. I feared that, should he suffer heart failure, "heroic measures" might be taken, so he would be "saved" only to suffer more from the cancer. The doctors who had treated him previously were aware that he had signed a Living Will. However, one specialist seemed to view my husband more as a pair of diseased lungs than a whole man, and was determined to save him should heart failure occur. It took days of arguing and button-holing every responsible person I could reach for the instructions of "No Code" to be included on his chart. (The "No Code" signified that no resuscitation team would be summoned.)

If your spouse (or family member) has signed a Living Will, my advice would include:

1) Talk the situation over thoroughly with your family so that there is no doubt in anyone's mind as to your intentions.

2) Discuss this philosophy at length with your family doctor, who will be the admitting doctor and responsible for any instructions to be included on the patient's chart regardless of any specialists who might be called in. Doctors are trained to save lives, and some are unable to make the mental adjustment to a passive course of no action. If the doctor seems reticent or unwilling to follow your wishes, change doctors!

3) Once the patient is admitted to the hospital, make sure the instructions on the chart are in accord with your wishes; keep pestering the doctor until they are.

4) If treatment is being prescribed that is offensive to the patient and family, the family can check the patient out of the hospital without the doctor's release.

Abby, we can die with dignity, but it might take great perseverance on the part of our spouses and family to make sure we are given the opportunity.

Interviewer Wood asking penetrating questions of robot

R2D2 goes commercial

By LON WOOD

He's R2-D2 gone commercial.

Sucking a six-pack of *Trade Mark Reg. Coke, he whirled into the Times newsroom — buzzing and babbling a full range of electronic twitterings.

The interview was short — almost as short as the 29½ seconds it took for 35-odd people to appear out of nowhere and form a semi-circle around him.

"I. . .come. . .from. . . At. . .lan. . .ta . . .Geor. . .gia," the transistorized tin man told the interviewer. "I. . .will. . .be . . .liv. . .ing. . .in. . . Vic. . .tor. . .i. . .a. . . now."

An attempt at determining the objective of his mission did not compute. Suddenly, Lights flashed and his dome started spinning. Then he broke into dance — to loud disco emanating from within his cylindrical torso.

Spying a four-year-old waiting for his dad to come home from his dreary office chores, the mechanical huckster wheeled over and attempted a conversation:

"Hello . . .I. . .like . . . little . . . boys . . . don't . . . be . . . afraid," "I am," mumbled the lad before becoming totally speechless.

Earlier the robot visited several Victoria supermarkets, dividing crowds of shoppers like Moses parted the Red Sea.

There were looks of shock, disbelief and embarrassment as people talked back to the inquisitive visitor.

Kids were spellbound, but most were silent until the strange little fellow wheeled himself away. Then they asked their elders, "Where does it sleep? What does it eat? Where does it go on the weekend? How much would one cost?"

Well, the flashy little fellow sleeps at 3934 Quadra — that's where he lives. And his diet is pure juice — electrical power that is, to recharge his 12-volt system. Weekends are spent resting so he can appear all week at club banquets, supermarkets and sundry special events. How much to buy? There's a $10,000 price tag on him — but ordering two would likely cut the unit price somewhat.

So far all he is really lacking is a name. Any suggestions should be sent to Robot Name, care of the Quadra Street address.

Facing judge minus lawyer may not be such a bad idea

By AB KENT

People who represent themselves before the law don't always have a fool for a client, a lawyer's lawyer told students Friday.

Dr. Simon Verdun-Jones, chairman of criminology at Simon Fraser University, said there is no evidence that having a lawyer makes any difference to the outcome of cases.

Despite the rapid rise of legal aid counselling and public defenders in the criminal justice system, Verdun-Jones said in a speech at the University of Victoria, large numbers of people appear in court without counsel.

"There is no evidence they are treated less fairly than those who have secured private or legal aid counsel," he said.

In fact where there is a question of competency, Verdun-Jones added, some research shows the opposite may be true.

"Courts may be more willing to listen to an unrepresented accused than to hear an incompetent lawyer," he explained.

The biggest problem is the lack of research to really define the situation.

Verdun-Jones said there are also indications of other disadvantages to having counsel,, among them the fact that the presence of a lawyer tends to prolong cases.

Another factor is that crown counsel tend to present a much tougher case when confronted by opposing lawyers and are more reluctant to drop charges.

He said two studies of conviction rates between persons without lawyers and those who had counsel, showed no difference in verdict, punitive sentence or whether bail was granted.

Verdun-Jones also said the absence of a defence counsel may mean elimination of unnecessary plea-bargaining beforehand.

Some research shows the person unrepresented by a lawyer is likely to be unemployed, casual in appearance and less likely to have been previously involved with the law.

Verdun-Jones said an indigent accused may well feel the whole thing will be over with quicker if he has no counsel since he sees the lawyer as part of an oppressive criminal justice system.

"Native Indians are often of this mind and have no tradition of seeking legal aid," he said.

In most cases, it is the person charged with a summary offence who has no lawyer.

"But studies show a surprising number of accused facing serious charges appear without counsel," he said.

A 1965 survey by the joint committee on legal aid in Ontario showed a large number of indigents refused legal aid — knowing it was available — for these reasons:

-They knew they were guilty.

-They had no confidence in legal aid.

-They thought the court would be prejudicial toward them in sentencing if they had legal aid.

-They were convinced by police there was no need to be represented, saw no need for a lawyer or had a previous conviction.

Verdun-Jones said the American Bar Association, Canadian legal societies and the U.S. president's crime commission all say an accused person is prejudiced by not having counsel.

Some legal authorities consider the absence of counsel in the courtroom a challenge to the adversary system of justice which results in a lesser quality of justice.

Verdun-Jones said more money should be put into the paralegal system so that people may have some form of counsel before having to face the court.

"In my own experience with Indians, a court worker serves better than a lawyer in many cases and it's cheaper," he said.

A great name in 20th century classical music performance is that of cellist Leonard Rose.

His appearance here tomorrow and Monday as guest soloist with Victoria Symphony Orchestra is one of 100 such performances he undertakes annually in every quarter of the globe.

With Paul Freeman conducting, Rose will be play Schumann's Concerto in A minor, a lyrical and well-loved concertos from cello repertoire.

Freeman will also pursue innovative programming by performing the overture to Colas et Colinette, an opera written by Quesnel, the 18th century sea captain, merchant, poet and composer who spent most of his creative life in Montreal.

The work is believed to be the first Canadian opera and while the score and many of the parts have been lost, contemporary Canadian composer Godfrey Ridout was able to reconstruct the opera from the parts that survived.

Brahms' first symphony, often dubbed Beethoven's tenth is the concluding work.

Badura-Skoda

A week-long celebration of the music of Mozart and his contemporaries begins Sunday, March 23 at University Centre Auditorium with a performance of Haydn's Creation.

Throughout the week following there will be a series of concerts, lectures and workshops.

Special guests for the series are Viennese pianist Paul Badura-Skoda, his wife, Dr. Eva Badura-Skoda who is one of the leading musicologists of the Viennese school, and Lotfi Mansouri, director of the Canadian Opera Company.

The Creation will be performed by the University Chorus and Little Orchestra, directed by George Corwin. The soloists are soprano Iris Fraser, UVic's resident baritone, Bernard Turgeon, and tenor David Astor.

The Purcell String Quartet, UVic faculty artists Paul Kling and Robin Wood, and a number of students will also be participating in this event for which one of the organizers has been the School of Music's Dr. Gordana Lazarevich.

Dr. Lazarévich says that it is hoped to make the event an annual one, focusing each time on a different composer, his music and his era.

"In this first series," she says, "we are showing Mozart in perspective — including some of the written work that has been done on him."

Much of the latter will be included in Mozart in Retrospect. Under this heading lectures and lecture demonstrations will be presented by faculty and graduate students of the School of Music in the music wing's recital hall. These will occupy the morning of March 28 from 9 a.m. to noon and are free to all.

From the public point of view, highlights of the week will include the evening recital Friday March 28 by Badura-Skoda and his second appearance Sunday March 30 when he will perform the Mozart Piano Concerto in C Major K. 503, with Corwin and the Little Orchestra.

Other events in order: A noon recital by students of the School of Music, March 25 and that evening a concert of music by Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven performed by the Purcell Quartet.

The week will also provide a recital by Paul Kling and Robin Wood and a day-long workshop on Mozart and opera with Mansouri directing rehearsals of scenes from The Marriage of Figaro. Dr. Eva Badura-Skoda will give a lecture on "Vocal Cadenzas in the Operas of Mozart".

Relationships between singers and director in defining and interpreting a role will be discussed and demonstrated by Mansouri and Turgeon and this will be followed by performance of the earlier rehearsed Figaro scenes.

A showcase student concert and noon-hour event entitled The Faculty Serenades Mozart are other events in the week-long program.

There is no admission charge for many of the events, including the opera workshop, but admission tickets for this must be obtained from the School of Music general office.

CANADIAN PLAYWRIGHT James Reaney wove into his play Handcuffs a look at both sides of a feud that ultimately led to the massacre of the Donnelly family — known in Canadian history as "The Black Donnellys" of Ontario. Handcuffs is currently being staged tonight through to March 22 (except Sunday) at UVic's Phoenix Theatre. Under direction of Jim Leard, the 20-member cast explores themes of religion, politics and personal rivalry which made up the 30-year saga which ended a century ago. Curtain time each performance is 8 p.m. with tickets at the door or by reserving at 477-4821.

Iseler Singers 'finest'

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A 20-member chamber choir that is unquestionably in the minds of many experts, the finest of its kind in Canada, is to present a single concert in Victoria, Saturday March 22.

The Elmer Iseler Singers, named for their founder-conductor, will appear at University Centre Auditorium under the joint sponsorship of the University of Victoria and McPherson Playhouse Foundation. The program will illustrate the catholicity of their repertoire which ranges from Bach to Acadian folk songs and includes church, as well as secular and popular music of five centuries.

Dr. Iseler was the founder of the famous Festival Singers of Canada, a group that in its 24-year history gained international recognition with tours throughout North America and Europe.

Many prestigious awards and accolades have been conferred on Dr. Iseler during his long career. They include honorary degrees from two Canadian universities, the Silver Medal of Paris — he was the first Canadian to be so honored — and the Order of Canada.

A guest conductor with the Victoria Symphony and Amity Singers this winter he provided one of the season's memorable events. He has conducted and performed with many orchestras around the world, and has had the patronage and support of many of the world's renowned artists such as Aaron Copland, Glenn Gould, Seiji Ozawa, Igor Stravinsky, Harry Somers and Healey Willan.

Excerpts of career on stage

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Joseph Wiseman, a Canadian-born actor, will give an evening of excerpts in Victoria this Monday night from roles he has played on London and New York stages — as well as selections of drama and humor from Yiddish and Jewish literature.

Wiseman, who will appear at Newcombe Auditorium, most recently appeared as the rabbi in Elie Wiesel's Zalmen, or the Madness of God, recently televised over the U.S. Public Broadcasting System.

Wiseman is the first of two visitors being brought to Victoria by Congregation Emmanuel. The second, Dr. Max Vorspan, a social historian, will be here April 22. Ticket information can be obtained by calling 382-0615.

The Lenten concert series continues Friday as part of the Victoria Conservatory of Music's community involvement. The series is presented each Friday through March at the noon hour of 12:15 p.m. in the Church of Our Lord, 626 Blanshard.

The artist for the coming week is well known soprano Adele Lewis who will be assisted by the Conservatory String Quartet and Peter Merry, trumpet. They will be performing Bach's Jauchzet Gott in allen Landen.

In the evening at 8 at Craigdarroch Castle, works by Beethoven, Mozart, Dukas and others will be presented by an unusual combination consisting of Peter Burris, horn; Eugene Dowling, tuba, and Edward Norman, piano.

If it has occurred to anyone to wonder about the professional fees involved in connection with the excellent free noontime concerts at McPherson Playhouse this season, the answer is that those fees are taken care of by grants from the Music Performance Trust Fund of New York.

Through the Victoria Musicians' Association, Local 247 A.F. of M., the Trust Fund, during the past six months, has contributed $3,000 in fees to Victoria musicians participating in this series.

The funds were supplied by the Recording Companies of America, a public service organization created under agreements with the American Federation of Musicians.

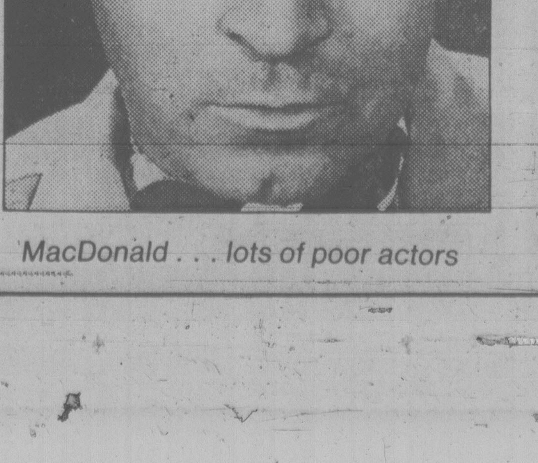
The Chieftains — Ireland's greatest folk musicians — will be in New York on St. Patrick's Day, but they'll do no wearin' o' the green. They have a Monday interview on ABC-TV's Good Morning America — right when the Irish of the Big Apple take to the streets for their parade. A week later they fly to Victoria for one night at the McPherson Playhouse.

Kristy McNichol, who will make her movie debut in Little Darlings now being filmed in Toronto, calls the film old-fashioned. "This movie is so innocent compared to what goes on out there (in California)," says 17-year-old McNichol. "If parents think this is harsh, I'd like them to see what really goes on. Despite McNichol's characterization, the picture received a restricted rating in the U.S. Its Canadian rating is not yet settled. In the film McNichol smokes cigarettes, swears and accepts a bet she can lose her virginity sooner than her co-star, Tatum O'Neal.

Farrah Fawcett has a new role — a try at saving the lives of countless women who may have cancer and not know it. She'll be the next chairman of the American Cancer Society's Women Against Cancer. "I'll try to reach people who otherwise couldn't be reached without me. It will give me a chance to talk about something other than me, me, me."



MacDonald . . . lots of poor actors

Canadians are not in acting for the money, says Dan MacDonald, a Canadian actor, writer and director. There are only six professional Canadian actors making more than $20,000 a year, MacDonald told the Canadian Club in Prince Albert. The Canadian actor's average wage is $5,000 a year. "Either we have a culture or we don't have a culture, but let's make up our minds before they are made up for us by people outside our country who do not have our best interests at heart," he said. MacDonald called for a national arts policy that will allow "Canadian culture to be established by Canadians."

Elvis may be gone, but thanks to the state of show biz technology, he'll be coming out soon with a brand new album of duets with the Statler Brothers, Dolly Parton, and Waylon Jennings. Elvis' longtime producer, Felton Jarvis, and producer Chip Young have been stripping away instrumental and backup vocal tracks in Nashville from a collection of old tapes so more up-to-date voices can be dubbed in and harmonized. They're after Barbra Streisand, Neil Diamond and Paul McCartney as well. Only Kenny Rogers has turned them down.
